FOREWORD.

It is a happy sign that the study of Ardhamāgadhi is becoming more popular since the introduction of the subject for the College and University examinations in the Bombay University. Some important books which were scarcely available for scholars are being printed and annotated. It has given impetus to the study of Jainism, an important ancient Indian religion which influenced the life of the people in India, especially in the South India, for thousands of years.

Another most important feature in the introduction of the language is that it is expected to stimulate the study of Prākṛits which help considerably to study the modern Indian Languages philologically. The Bombay University, therefore, is to be congratulated for a happy move in this direction.

Mr. A. T. Upadhye showed me a copy of "Vivāgasuyam" which he edited with introduction and notes and requested me to write a foreword to it. I went through the book with pleasure and found the following features in it which induced me to consent to his request. It contains useful introduction, a carefully edited text, exhaustive notes and translation, which, I hope, will greatly facilitate the study of the book by the students. Mr. Upadhye has given the Sanskrit equivalents of Ardhamāgadhi words and phrases which increase the interest in his notes. He has generally followed the commentary of Abhayadeva in his translation and notes. All these features of the book are indeed very welcome to the student-world and the general reader.

I hope Mr. Upadhye will be able to render more and more useful service to the student-world and the general reader by editing more and more useful books in the language.

PREFACE.

The main object of this new edition of Vivāgasuyam is to meet the requirements of the F. Y. A. students of Ardhamagadhi for whom it has been found to be a suitable text book by the University of Bombay. There are already about half a dozen editions of this book. But none of them, in my opinion, fully satisfies the requirements of the F. Y. A. student, if we take into account the fact that it is in the F. Y. A. class that the study of Ardhamagadhi begins for the first time. Students selecting Sanskrit, for instance, as their second language get their text books fully annotated and translated into English. But the Ardhamagadhi students are put to disadvantage for want of such editions of their texts. It is to fulfil this want and to help and encourage the beginner in the study of the Ardhamagadhi language that this edition of Vivāgasuyam is chiefly designed. Dr. P. L. Vaidya's edition of Vivāgasuyam is scholarly in itself. But it serves the purpose of the teacher rather than of the taught. Of all the editions, however, Dr. Vaidya's edition is the best for its critically edited text. I have, therefore, generally followed the text of his edition in cases of doubt and also the numbering of its paragraphs for facility of ready reference, for which I express my gratitude and indebtedness to Dr. P. L. Vaidya. In the notes, which are exhaustive, I have made a judicious use of Abhayadeva's commentary on Vigāsuyani, making its inclusion in this volume unnecessary.

Dr. S. C. Nandimath M.A., Ph. D. was kind enough to go through my edition and write a foreword to it. I am very much grateful to him for his encouragement in my first attempt of editing an Ardhamagadhi text.

I have also to thank Mr. Satappa Phadeppa Chaugule of the Mahavir Press and his staff for doing the work of printing quickly and efficiently.

INTRODUCTION.

I

1. History of the Jain Canon.

The orthodox Jains of even today date back their sacred Canon to the time of Rishabha, their first Tirthankara, who lived in a hoary past. But the more reasonable amongst them think that the present Canon was composed by the immediate disciples of Mahāvīra by putting in order their Master's preachings and the stories of his disciples and followers. This latter view finds support in the following statement of the आवश्यकसूत्र, viz., 'अत्थं भासइ अरिहा सुत्तं गंथंति गणहरा निउणं'. Besides, from the introductory and concluding remarks of many of the Scriptures, we come to know that सुधर्म, the 5th गणधर of Mahāvīra, is responsible for giving a word-form to many of them. For a long time after the death of Mahāvīra in 467 B. C., the scriptures were handed down to posterity by oral delivery.

In the reign of Chandragupta Maury (322 B. C. to 298 B. C.), there was a g famine in the North lasting for 12 years.

that time, one section of the Jain monks migrated to the South under the leadership of Bhadrabāhu. Another section remained in the North with Sthūlabhadra at its head. When the famine ended the monks who had remained behind found that the Canon was on the point of being lost in oblivion. In order to avert this crisis, a council of monks was called at पाटलिपुत्र under the presidentship of स्थूलभद्र. The council collected together the 11 'Anga's but could not restore the 12th Anga completely. And now the 12th Anga is supposed to have been lost altogether. The Canon thus restored was not recognised by the followers of Bhadrabāhu who had migrated to the South in the great famine and who had returned to their homes after the famine was over. And even today the Digambar sect of the Jains does not recognise its authenticity. According to some, this was the germ of the great split of the community into Digambars and Shvetāmbaras which was finally confirmed in the 1st century A. D.

The Canon which was thus restored continued to be handed down orally for about eight centuries more. In the beginning of the sixth century A. D., there was again a great famine which endangered the very existence of the Scriptures. So, a second Council of monks was convoked by Devardhiganin at Valabhi in Kathiāvār. The Council of Pātaliputra was held in the East and the Council of Valabhi was held in the West. Besides there was a long intervening period between them during which the texts continued to be handed down orally. It may therefore be asserted that the language of the Canon, as it is found at present, must be considerably different from its original and even from its first redaction at Pātaliputra. The council of Pātaliputra restored only the eleven Angas, while the Council of Valabhi collected many more scriptures, a complete list of which will be found in Nandīsūtra, a work composed by Devardhiganin himself, the convener of the Council. This Council not only restored, but also reduced to writing the sacred Canon. From that time onwards the Canon has remained intact, though some of the books are now lost and the contents of some others have suffered.

2. Position of Vivāgasuyam in the Canon.

The Shvetāmbar Jain Canon or Sacred Literature may be divided into two groups, viz., अङ्गप्रविष्ट and अङ्गवाह्य. The अङ्गप्रविष्ट group now consists of the eleven Anga Scriptures—the 12th one being altogether lost-composed by Ganadharas. The अङ्गवाक्य group comprises the remaining canonical works composed by the immediate successors of Ganadharas. According to a more modern classification, the divisions of the Jain Canon will be as follows--

1. the eleven Angas;
2. the twelve Upāngas;
3. the ten Prakīrnakas;
4. the four Mūlasūtras;
5. the six Chedasūtras; and
6. an unnamed group of Nandīsūtra and Anuyogadvārasūtra.

Our present work Vivāgasuyam is the last of the eleven Angas.

3. The Title-Vivāgasuyam.

The title विवागसुयं (विपाकश्रुतम्) is explained in Nandīsūtra as—विपचनं विपाकः शुभाशुभकर्मपरिणाम इत्यर्थः, तत्प्रतिपादकं श्रुतं विपाकश्रुतम्. Abhayadeva, in his commentary on Vivāgasuyam, explains it as—विपाकः पुण्यपापरूपकर्मफलं, तत्प्रतिपादनपरं श्रुतं आगमः विपाकश्रुतम्. And this title is justified by the contents of the book. It is divided into two parts called दुहविवाग (दुःखविपाक) and सुहविवाग (सुखविपाक). The first part, दुःखविपाक or 'the result of bad acts', has ten chapters each containing the story of a person suffering for bad acts done in his previous life. सुयविवेक, the second part, is also comprised of ten chapters, each containing a story illustrating the "result of good acts" done in the past existence.

4. Narrative Literature & Its Purpose.

The one thing that strikes most even to a casual reader of Jain Literature is the use of innumerable stories made in it. The usefulness of the stories for propagating and impressing upon the minds of the readers the religious principles is a recognised fact. The average man for whom such stories are meant is easily persuaded to abstain from bad actions or attracted to do good ones by the examples of men who suffered for bad acts or of men who were rewarded for good ones. It is however doubtful whether such simple & unimaginative stories will make any appeal at all to the mind of the modern reader who has been taught to test everything by the application of stern logic. But even to this day, they create an impression on the mind of the average religious-minded man. The Jain monks turned this to good account by incorporating stories in their sermons and preachings. There are some canonical works such as आचाराङ्ग, सूत्रकृताङ्ग, दशवैकालिक, etc., which deal exclusively with doctrinal things. On the other hand there are works exclusively giving stories, like उपासकदशान्न which gives stories of 10 followers of Mahāvīra, अन्तर्दशान्न and अनुत्तरोपपातिक दशान्न which together give or rather refer to 125 stories, and विपाकश्रुत which gives 20 stories. Between these two extreme types, we have works like उत्तराध्ययन where the doctrinal matter is mixed up with stories, legends and parables. Even the commentators on these books go out of their way and narrate stories. It need not be supposed, however, that the Jain story-tellers are not capable of writing better stories than the dry ones contained in the canonical works. If we proceed further to the later literature, we will find "novels, romances and funny stories—in fact stories of every kind." But whether it be a novel, a romance, or a simple story, it turns in the end to be a religious story and has its moral to preach. Oftentimes this moral turns out on the Karma theory and the theory of Rebirth which is a corollary of the former. To quote J. Hertel—"According to the Jain doctrine every living being stores up a certain amount of good and of bad actions in every existence, and this amount of previous deeds is known by the name of Karman. This Karman is represented as something material, and it must be completely consumed, before a soul can possibly be released from the migration of souls (Sansāra), and attain final and eternal bliss (Nirvāna, Moksha). It depends on Karman whether a soul in its subsequent existences is incorporated in the body of an animal, of a human creature, of a god, or of a demon, whether it is to spend its existence on earth, or in one of the several heavens or hells. On Karman exclusively depend the amount of happiness or misfortune which every soul is to undergo, the caste in which it is to be born, and even its intellectual and moral qualities. During every new existence the soul is gathering new, or as the case may be, consuming old Karman. Even the least good action leads to good, and the least bad action leads to bad consequences."

5. Social Picture.

The stories contained in Vivāgasuyam being merely the creation of imagination, have no historical importance. They are however useful in giving us a picture of the society of the times in which they were composed, and it will be interesting to note a few aspects of the society reflected in the stories. The people seem to be fairly superstitious. If a mother used to give birth to still-born children, her living new-born child was thrown either on a dunghill or beneath a cart and then brought back in the belief that it will thereby be long-lived. Deities were propitiated as givers of issues, and the birth of a child was celebrated with great pomp and splendour. Women had fanciful pregnancy longings which were satisfied by their husbands. Human sacrifices were offered to obtain the favour of deities.

Such vices as drinking, gambling, flesh-eating, adultery, cattle-lifting and theft were prevalent. The moral code of the times was at the same time very rigorous. Thus theft and adultery (even with a kept mistress) were met with capital punishment. The mode of inflicting the punishment was extremely cruel and barbarous. The offender was proclaimed and publicly led through the squares of the town. While the offender was being led to the gallows his parents, children, brothers, sisters and even distant relatives and friends were mercilessly slaughtered before his eyes without any fault of their own. His ears and nose were cut off. Pieces of flesh as small as the 'sesamum' were cut out from his body and he was made to eat them. The fate of those offenders who were committed to jails, instead of being hanged, does not seem to be better. The keepers of jails treated them with the utmost cruelty. The jailors had numerous instruments of various kinds to inflict corporal punishment on the prisoners. They were made to lie down on their back, and their mouths being forced open, they were made to drink melted metal of various kinds. They were severally whipped being made to lie down on their bellies. They were tortured to bleeding by means of various instruments kept ready for the purpose. Limbs of their body were cut and pierced through with razors and other sharp instruments. Pins, nails and needles were thrust into various parts of their bodies, which were then bent by means of small hammers,—causing the severest pain thereby.

The medical science was not far advanced. The number of principal diseases seems to be limited to sixteen. Such simple remedies as enema, purgatives, vomiting, oiling and medicated baths were used in the case of most diseases. Excepting the cutting of veins and skin for the purpose of bleeding, surgical science was unknown.

Trade was in a flourishing condition. Merchants undertook sea-voyages, taking commodities of various kinds to foreign countries. There seems to be a curious practice concerning the merchantile community of those days that on the death of a merchant, his widow was allowed to enjoy her husband's property. But on her death, her son did not or could not inherit his father's property. It was probably confiscated to the state and the son was even turned out of his father's house, practically a beggar.

6. Language

Vivāgasuyam, as all other Canonical works of the Jains, is written in the Prakrit called Ardhamāgadhi. Some of its peculiar characteristics are:—

- (1). Nom. Sing. of masculine nouns ending in अ ends in ए instead of ओ as in other Prakrits, e. g., समणे भगवं महावारे.
- (2). The termination of the Loc. Sing. is अंस-वम्भंसि, कुञ्चिसि, etc.
- (3). In ordinary prakrits, there is no dative case. In Amg. we have the termination आए for the Dat. Sing., e. g. सवणयाए.
- (4). The use of some archaic forms such as समुप्पज्जित्था, हेत्था, पहरित्थ, वयामी, etc.

- (5) Some peculiar forms of the Absolute, e. g. कट्टु, साहट्टु, दच्चा, भोच्चा.
- (6) The Infinitive forms in इत्तए or एत्तए, e.g., उव्वसामित्तए, पासित्तए, गिण्हित्तए
- (7) Peculiar vocabulary and phrases, e.g., दोच्च, तच्च, कालमासे कालं किच्चा, चयं चइत्ता, उट्ठाए उट्ठेइ.
- (8) Lengthening of अ and insertion of म in some words, e. g , खिप्पामेव, जामेव, तामेव, एगमेग.
- (9) The initial न is generally retained, and the non-initial न is changed to ण, e. g.,
(i) नरग, नयरी; (ii) अणेग, कणग.
- (10) यद्गतिः—When a non-initial single consonant such as क, ग, च, ज, त, द, प, व or व is dropped, its place is taken by य; e. g., नयर, रायमगग, सुब्रहुयस्स, ओहय, रायमाण, पोयविणास.

7. Style.

The Vivāgasuyam has all the characteristics of the style of the Jain Sūtra Literature. The style of the Jain Sūtras is mechanical. Barnett remarks—"one of the most curious features of the Jain scriptures is the mechanical character of their verbal structure. A vast number of phrases, sentences, and the whole periods recur again and again with mathematical regularity; but instead of being written out in full, they are usually abbreviated, the first and the last words only being given, with the word જાવ (initial) to denote the intermediate words add often even this stenographic symbol is left out." Oftentimes the word વળગો serves the same purpose. "The loose constructions and the want of economy in expressions are other features of the Jain scriptures." Synonymous words and expressions are put together without the addition of any meaning, e. g., ચડગરપહગર, વન્દઈ નમંસઈ, અણિટ્ટા અકન્તા અપિયા અમણુત્રા અમણામા. "The descriptive part containing long compounds and generally the descriptive passages, such as those of a garden, a temple etc., seem to be later additions in imitation of the prevalent ornate style of long compounds and luxurious descriptions which was considered of literary prestige in those days." The interchange of cases is a common feature, e. g., તેણં કાલેણં તેણં સમણં, જામેવ દિસિં પાડખૂયા તામેવ દિસિં પડિગયા, જેણેવ મિયાદેવીએ મિહે તેણેવ ડવાગએ. The figure 2 is used after a finite verb to denote its absolutive, e. g., આચાહિણ પચાહિણં કરેઈ ૨ વન્દઈ નમંસઈ ૨. The same figure used after an adjective indicates the repetition of the adjective, e. g., પડિજાગ/યાણી ૨ વિહરઈ. Figures 4 and 5 are used to denote synonymous words numbering 4 and 5 respectively, e. g., અસણં 4 આહારેઈ, અઙ્ગલિય 5.

(i) दुहविवाग.

Summary:—The first part of the book called दुहविवाग contains 10 chapters, each giving the story of a man or woman who suffered for bad acts done in the previous life. Excepting the first story इन्द्रभूति गौतम, while on his begging tour, sees a man or woman being tortured and led to gallows or in some other miserable condition. Seeing the pitiable sight a thought of the following description occurs to गौतम's mind, viz., “अहो णं इमे पुरिसे (or दारए, or एसा इत्थिया as the case may be) पुरापोराणाण दुच्चिण्णाणं दुप्पडिक्कन्ताणं असुभाणं पावाणं कडाण कम्माण पावगं फलवित्तिविसेस पच्चणुभवमाणे विहरइ । न मे दिट्ठा नरगा वा नेरइया वा । पच्चक्खं खलु अयं पुरिसे नरगपडिह्वियं वेयणं वेयइ.” Then after returning from his begging tour गौतम questions Mahāvīr, his Master, as follows—“से णं भन्ते पुरिसे पुव्वभवे के आसी?.....किं वा दच्चा किं वा भोच्चा किं वा समायरित्ता केसिं वा.....कम्माणं पावगं फलवित्तिविसेसं पच्चणुभवमाणे विहरइ.?” To satisfy the query of his disciple, Mahāvīra narrates the past and present lives of the person concerned. Having heard the narration of the past and present lives of the person, a curiosity is produced in गौतम's mind to learn his future as well; and he questions his Master thus—“से णं, भन्ते पुरिसे इओ कालमासे कालं किञ्चा कर्हि गमेहिइ, कर्हि उव्वज्जिहिइ ?” Then Mahāvira goes on to narrate the future transmigrations of the soul of the person concerned until the soul finally attains Liberation. Thus every story can be divided into three parts, i. e., the past, the present and the future life of the person concerned. This order is followed in giving the summary of the stories. As the stereotyped features mentioned above are all common to every story, they have been told once for all without repeating them in every story. The reader can easily insert them at proper places.

1. The story of Miya̐putta.

(i) Ikkāi was a District-officer in the small town Vijayavaddhamāna. He ruled over 500 villages. He was irreligious and tortured his subjects in various ways. Once he was attacked by 16 diseases simultancously. Many physicians tried various remedies to cure him. But they could not cure even one of the 16 diseases. He died of the diseases and was born in the Rayanappabhā hell. At the expiry of the allotted period of his existence there, he entered the womb of Miya̐, queen of Vijaya, the king of Miyaggāma.

(ii) Since the time queen Miyā conceived the child, she suffered from very severe pangs. Formerly she was liked and loved by her husband. But now she became loathsome to him. When the child was born it was ugly and deformed, having mere cavities at the places of the various organs. So she thought of abandoning the child on a dunghill. King Vijaya happened to know this and persuaded the queen to nurse the child secretly in a secret place. The child had a disease called Agnika. Whatever he ate was immediately turned into pus and blood which too he greedily devoured.

Once when Mahāvīra was on a visit to Miyaggāma, a certain miserable blind man went to pay his respects to him. Seeing the blind man, Indrabhūti Gautama, the seniormost disciple of Mahāvīra, asked his Master whether there was any other man, at the time, who was more miserable than him. Mahāvīra pointed to Miyāputta as being such a person. Then Gautama, with the permission of his Master, goes to Miyā and sees her son Miyāputta in the miserable condition described above.

On his return, Gautama learns from Mahāvīra, as explained above in the introductory remarks, the past and the future transmigra-tions of the soul of Miyāputta. His present and past lives have already been narrated. His future transmigrations, as revealed or related by Mahāvīra, are given below:—

(iii) After completing the course of his present existence Miyāputta—or rather his soul—will be born as a lion in this very country of Bhārāha, then in the first hell called Rayanappabhā, then as a reptile, then in the 2nd hell, then as a bird, then in the 3rd hell, then again as a lion, then in the 4th hell, then as a snake, then in the 5th hell, then as a woman, then in the 6th hell, then as a man and then in the 7th hell.

After that he will be born again and again several hundreds of thousand times among innumerable families of aquatic creatures of lower species possessing 5 sense organs, such as fish etc. After that he will be similarly born several hundreds of thousand times among creatures possessing 4 sense organs, creatures possessing 3 sense organs, creatures possessing 2 sense organs, creatures possessing one sense organ, viz., plants, fire-bodies, wind-bodies, water-bodies and earth-bodies.

Then he will be born as a bull in the city of Supaittha and then as a man in a rich family of that very city. Having accepted and strictly followed monkhood in this life, after death he will be born in the Sohamma heaven. Finally he will be born as a man in the Mahāvideha country, and in this existence he will be liberated.

2. The story of Ujjhiyaya.

(i) In the town of Hatthināura there was a cattle-lifter named Bhīma. In that town there was a big cattle-pen where many cows, bulls, buffalos, and calves were fed with plenty of grass and water. Uppalā, the wife of the cattle-lifter, had once a longing during her pregnancy to taste the flesh of cattle. Bhīma satisfied her desire by the flesh of the cattle in the cattle-pen. In due time, Uppalā gave birth to a child. As soon as the child was born it shrieked so fiercely that all the cattle in the town were frightened. It was for this reason that the child was given the name of Gottāsaya (cattle-frightener.) After the death of Bhīma Gottāsaya continued the profession of his father. He used to kill the cattle in the town and eat their flesh. This resulted in his being born in the second hell after death.

(ii) At the end of his existence in that hell the soul of Gottāsaya descended in the womb of Subhaddā, the wife of a merchant, Vijayamitta by name, in the town of Vaniyagāma. Subhaddā used to give birth to still-born children. As soon as the child was born, it was thrown on a dung-hill and brought back in order to ensure a long life for it. So the boy was named Ujjhiyaya (abandoned). Once when Vijayamitta was on a sea-voyage, the ship was wrecked in the midst of the ocean and caused his death. Subhaddā, too, died shortly afterwards due to her grief for her husband. After the death of his parents Ujjhiyaya was driven out of his house by the city police. He then became addicted to all sorts of vices including wine and woman. He became attached to a harlot named Kāmajjhayā. Now siri, queen of Mitta, the ruler of the town, was suffering from a disease of the womb. So Mitta turned out Ujjhiyaya from Kāmajjhayā's house and kept her as his mistress. Being unable to live without Kāmajjhayā, Ujjhiyaya used to visit her secretly. One day he was found there by the king and was ordered to be executed.

(iii) After innumerable miserable births in hell etc., Ujjhiyaya will be born as a merchant's son in Champā. Then being born in the Sohamma heaven, and then in the Mahāvideha country, he will be finally liberated.

3. The story of Abhaggasena.

(i) In the city of Purimatāla, there once lived a dealer in eggs by name Ninnaya. He employed many men to collect eggs and sold them to the public and also himself used to eat them. As a result of this he acquired bad Karman and in his next life was born in the third hell. At the end of the allotted period there, he descended in the womb of Khandasirī, the wife of Vijaya, the head of the robbers' settlement on the frontier of Purimatāla.

(ii) In due course Khandasirī gave birth to a child who was named Abhaggasena. After the death of Vijaya, Abhaggasen became the robber-chief. As he harrassed the country near about Purimatāl very much, the people approached Mahābal, king of Purimatāla, who sent his army against Abhaggasena. The army was defeated by Abhaggasen, and the king had to employ the following device to entrap him. The king ordered a public festival to be held in which every one was allowed to enjoy all kinds of amusements. Abhaggasen the robber-chief was also invited to the festival. Ahhaggasen attended the festival, bringing rich presents to the king. The king honoured him and gave him a newly built palace for his residence. He feasted him and his party with sumptuous food. When Abhaggasen was rolling in pleasures unawares, the king caused the gates of the city to be closed and the thief to be caught. He was then ordered to be hanged.

(iii) As a result of his bad actions Abhaggasen will be born in various species of lower animals etc. At last he will be born in the family of a merchant in Vanārasi and leading a religious life, he will be finally liberated.

4. The story of Sagada.

(i) In the town of Chhagalapura there lived a shepherd named Chhaniya. He had hundreds and thousands of animals. He killed many of them every day and prepared delicious dishes of the flesh. He used to sell and himself partake of them. As a result of this, he was born in the fourth hell in his next life. From there he descended in the womb of Bhaddā, wife of the merchant Subhadda in the town of Sahanjani.

(ii) In due course Bhaddā gave birth to a child who was named Sagada, as he was placed under a cart (Sagada) and then taken back, in the belief that the child will thereby be long lived. While Subhadda was on a sea-voyage with his merchandise, the ship was wrecked and Subhadda lost his life. The death of her husband and the loss of wealth caused by the ship-wreck affected Subaddā so much that she died of grief soon afterwards. Young Sagada, who was then deprived of his father's house and property, fell a victim to many vices and became attached to a harlot named Sudarisanā. Susena, the minister of the town, also became attached to Sudarisanā, turned Sagada out of her house and kept her as his own mistress. A few days afterwards Susena was greatly enraged to find Sagada and Sudarisanā together. He took them to the King. Sagada was then killed, being made to embrace a red-hot iron statue of a woman.

(iii) After many low births in hell etc., both Sagada and Sudarisanā will again get human existence being born as twins-brother and sister in the town of Rāyagiha. In youth the twin-brother, becoming enamoured of the beauty of his twin-sister, will enjoy human pleasures with her. As a result of this sin, the soul of Sadada will undergo many more miserable births and then will be born in the family of a merchant in Vanāraṣi. Afterwards being born in the Sohamma heaven and then in the Mahāvideha country, he will finally be liberated.

5. The story of Bahassaidatta.

(i) In the country of Bhāraha, there was a town Savvaobhadda where Mahesaradatta, well-versed in the 4 Vedas, was the priest of King Jiyasattu. Whenever the king fought his enemies, the priest used to offer human sacrifices to deities in order to ensure success for the king. As a result of this sin the priest, after death, was born in the fifth hell.

(ii) From there he was born as a son to Somadatta, priest of the King Sayāniya of the town Kosāmbi. The King had a son named Udāyana who was married to princess Paumāvai. Being of the same age, the prince and the priest's son—who was named Bahassaidatta—became great friends. When Udāyana succeeded his father Bahassaidatta was made the royal priest. Being intimate with Udāyana, Bahassaidatta had free access to the king's harem and there he formed illicit connection with queen Paumāvai. Udayana came to know this and ordered Bahassaidatta to be impaled.

(iii) After innumerable miserable births in hell etc., the soul of Bahassaidatta will be born in the family of a merchant in Hatthināura. Then being born in Sohamma and then in Mahāvideha, he will be finally liberated.

6. The story of Nandi.

(i) In the town of Sihapura there was a jailor named Dujjohana who used to torture the prisoners in various ways. As a result he was born in the 6th hell, from where he descended in the womb of Bandhusirī, queen of Siridāma, who ruled in the town Mahurā.

(ii) In due course Bandhusirī gave birth to the child who was named Nandi. On attaining to youth Nandi became greedy of the kingdom of his father and desired to kill him. A barber, who was in the confidence of the king, was engaged to do the work by thrusting his razor into the king's neck while shaving him, for doing which the prince promised him a reward of half the kingdom. Fearing the consequences which would follow if the plan was discovered by the king, the barber went straight to the king and disclosed the plan to him, who being enraged ordered the prince to be executed.

(iii) After innumerable miserable births in hell etc., Nandi's soul will be born as a merchant's son in Hatthināura. Then taking birth in 'Sohamma' and then in 'Mahāvideha', he will be finally liberated.

7. The story of Umbaradatta.

(i) In the town of Vijayapura, there was a physician named Dhannantari. For every disease and for all patients he prescribed flesh of some animal or other. As a result, he was born in the 6th hell. From there he descended into the womb of Gangadattā, wife of Sāgaradatta, a merchant in the town of Padalasanda.

(ii) In due course Gangadattā gave birth to the child who was named Umbaradatta by reason of his being begotten by the propitiation of a deity of that name. Sāgaradatta went on a sea voyage; his ship was wrecked and he lost his life. Gangadattā, too, died of grief soon afterwards. Deprived of his property and house, the youth Umbaradatta was once attacked by the 16 diseases simultaneously, which caused his death.

(iii) After innumerable miserable births in hell etc., he will be born as a merchant's son in Hatthināura. Then taking birth in 'Sohamma' and then in Mahāvideha, he will be finally liberated.

8. The story of Soriyadatta.

(i) In the town of Nandipura there was a cook named Sirī who served King Mitta. He used to cook different kinds of dishes out of the flesh of various creatures and serve them to the king. As a result, he was born in the 6th hell, from where he descended in the womb of Samuddadattā, wife of Samuddadatta, a fisherman of Soriyapur.

(ii) In due course Samuddadattā gave birth to the child, who was named Soriyadatta, after a deity of that name, by whose propitiation the child was believed to be obtained. After his father's death Soriyadatta continued his family profession of a fisherman. Once a fish-bone stuck into his throat which no one could extract. He suffered from this ailment for many years and consequently died of it.

(iii) After innumerable miserable births in hell etc. he will be born in a merchant's family in Hatthināura. Then being born in 'Sohamma' and then in Mahāvideha, he will be finally liberated.

9. The story of Devadattā.

(i) Sihasena, king of Supaittha, had 500 queens, of whom he was attached only to the seniormost queen Sāmā and neglected the others. Knowing this, the mothers of the remaining 499 wives thatched out a plan to kill Shāmā, who got a scent of it and became dejected. King Sihasena, however, consoled Sāmā and devised a plan to kill his remaining wives and their mothers. He got a lofty mansion to be built where he invited his 499 wives and their mothers for a feast. While they were enjoying the feast he set fire to the mansion and burnt them alive. As a result he was born in the 6th hell, from where he descended in the womb of Kanhasirī, wife of Datta, a merchant in the town Rohidaya.

(ii) In due course Kanhasirī gave birth to a female child who was named Devadattā. Young and beautiful Devadattā was once noticed by Vesamana, king of Rohidaya, who got her married to his son Pūsanandi. Pūsanandi, who succeeded his father, was very much devoted to his mother and neglected Devadattā, who therefore killed her mother-in-law. Enraged Pūsanandi condemned Devadattā to death.

(iii) After innumerable miserable births in hell etc., the soul of Sihasena will be born in a merchant's family in Gangapura. Then being born in 'Sohamma' and then in 'Mahāvideha', he will be finally liberated.

10. The story of Anjū.

(i) In the town of Indapura, there was a courtesan named Puhavisirī who enjoyed various human pleasures with various persons. As a result, in her next life she was born in the 6th hell, from where she entered the womb of Piyangu, wife of Dhanadeva, a merchant in Vaddhamānapura.

(ii) In due course Piyangu delivered a female child who was named Anjū. Young and beautiful Anjū was once seen by Vijaya, king of the town, who took her as his queen. Anjū got severe pains in the womb which no physician could cure. She suffered from the pains for several years and consequently died.

(iii) After innumerable miserable births in hell etc., the soul of Anjū will be born as a son to a merchant in the town Savvaobhadda. Then being born in 'Sohamma' and then in 'Mahāvideha', Anjū's soul will be finally liberated.

(ii) सुहृद्विवाग.

Like दुहृद्विवाग, the second part सुहृद्विवाग also contains 10 stories. But unlike the former, सुहृद्विवाग, as the name indicates, narrates stories of persons rewarded for good acts done in their previous lives. Excepting the names of persons and places etc., all the 10 stories in this part are exactly similar to each other. The text gives only the first story—that of Subāhu—in full and deals with the rest merely in outline, leaving the details to be supplied by such expressions as 'जहा सुबाहुस्त' or 'सं जहा सुबाहुस्त.' The summary of the first story only is therefore given below:—

The story of Subāhu.

In Hatthisīsa there ruled a King named Adīnsattu who had a son named Subāhu. When once Mahāvīr visited the town prince Subāhu paid his respects to him. Listening to Mahāvīra's sermon Subāhu accepted the vows of a householder.

Impressed by Subāhu's princely splendour Gautama asks Mahāvīra what Subāhu had done in his previous life to deserve it, to which Mahāvīra replied:—"Once there lived in Hatthināpur a householder named Sumuha. One day he offered pure food, with the best intention, to a monk named Sudatta at the time of his breaking a monthly fast. As a result he is born as prince Subāhu."

One day while engaged in meditation Subāhu thought of renouncing wordly life. Knowing this by his superior knowledge Mahāvīr returned to Hatthināpur in the course of his wanderings and took Subāhu under his Order. Leading a life of hard penance, after death, Subāhu was born in the Sohamma heaven.

Then after taking many births in heaven and as a human being alternately, he will be born in a rich family in Mahāvideha; and in this life he will be finally liberated.

NOTES.

[N. B.—The references are to paragraphs]

विवागसुयं—विपाकश्रुतं, The title of the work विवागसुयं has been explained in the Introduction.

पढम-प्रथम, first.

मुयक्खन्व-श्रुतस्खन्व, volume or part of a sacred text.

1. तेणं कालेणं तेणं समणं—तस्मिन् काले तस्मिन् समये, in that age and at that time. The Inst. is used for the Loc. Or ते, काले etc. may be taken in the Loc., णं being explained as an expletive.

होत्था, past tense of हू (भू) to be.

वण्णओ—(वर्णकः), description. The word has a peculiar use in the Amg. Jain Scriptures. It denotes stereotyped descriptions of persons and objects such as king, queen, prince, gardens, cities, temples etc. Instead of being given out in full, such descriptions are usually abbreviated, the first and the last words only being given, with the word जाव ('until') to denote the intermediate words; and often this stenographic symbol is left out, the word वण्णओ ('description') being substituted for the whole. They are to be mechanically reproduced from other texts of the Jain Canon in which they are given in full. ' वण्णओ ' here refers to such a description of the town चम्पा.

चेइय-चैत्य, temple

2. समण-श्रमण, an ascetic.

भगवन्त-revered, venerable. The Gen., Sing. भगवओ is derived from the corresponding Sk. form भगवतः महावीर-He is the 24th and the last Expounder of the Jain Faith.

अन्तेवासी-अन्तेवासिन्, disciple, pupil.

अज्ज-आर्य, revered, venerable, noble.

सुहम्म-सुधर्मन्; he was the fifth of the eleven गणवर or principal disciples of महावीर. He survived महावीर and handed down his master's teachings to posterity. सुधर्मन् had a pupil named जम्बू who puts questions to his master; and in many of the Jain scriptures सुधर्मन् is found explaining the preachings of महावीर in answer to the questions of जम्बू.

अणगार-अनगार, a houseless person, a monk.

जाइसंपन्न-जातिसंपन्न, of noble birth, or 'possessing knowledge of past existence.

चउदसपुव्वी-चतुर्दश + पूर्वी, who had studied the 14 पूर्व scriptures. The principal works that formed the Jain

Canon even before महावीर are called पूर्वs. They were 14 in number and are now lost.

चउनाणोवगय-चतुर्ज्ञानोपगत, who possessed the first 4 of the 5 kinds of knowledge. The Jain Metaphysics divides knowledge into 5 kinds, viz.,

(1) मतिज्ञान, knowledge coming from the sense organs.

(2) श्रुतिज्ञान, knowledge resulting from the study of the scriptures.

(3) अवधिज्ञान, knowledge acquired without the help of the senses within a limited sphere.

(4) मनःपर्यायज्ञान, knowledge of the thoughts and feelings of others.

(5) केवलज्ञान, infinite knowledge of the present, the past and the future.

आयाहिणपयाहिणा-आदक्षिण + प्रदक्षिणा, going round (a person or object) keeping (it) to one's right.

वन्दइ नमंसइ, २ एवं वयासी:—The figure २ occurring after a finite verb stands for its Indeclinable past participle. Thus here it stands for वन्दिता नमंसिता.

वयासी:—irregular past tense of वय (वच्) to speak derived from Sk. and used to denote both sing. and plu. numbers.

णं—ननु, verily, indeed. It is often used as an expletive; and its frequent occurrence is a peculiarity of the Ang. language.

भन्ते—A term of address to monks; ' revered sir '.

अङ्ग—The principle works of the श्वेतांबर Jain Canon are called the अङ्गs. They are 12 in number, of which the last one is lost. पण्हावागण (प्रश्नव्याकरण) is the 10th and विवागमुय (विवाकश्रुत) is the 11th अङ्ग.

अट्ठ—अर्थ, meaning, contents, purport.

पन्नत्त—प्रज्ञप्त, told, said, narrated, declared.

एकारसम-एकादश, eleventh.

4. दुहविवाग-दुःखविपाक, result or fruits of bad acts.

courteous address.

इन्द्रमह-इन्द्र+महः, a festival in honour of इन्द्र.

निगच्छ-निर्गम्, to go out.

इ वा-इति वा. From the noise of the crowd the blind man understands that the crowd was proceeding in a certain direction. Not knowing why the crowd was proceeding there, he is simply left to guess. The first thought that occurs to him is that there might be a festival held in honour of इन्द्र and that the crowd might be proceeding to see it. The expression इ वा is used to indicate such of his other guesses which are not given in the text.

निगच्छः-An object, for instance परिसा, should be supplied to this verb.

नो-no, not. ए-एते, these men, the crowd.

192. नवरं, (Ind.), but. जहा तेयली, just as तेयली had done; the story of तेयली will be found in नायाधम्मकहाओ.

195. नवइ-नवति, ninety. सेव-सैवम्-तदेवम्, it is so.

198. तारिसग-तादृशक, like that, of that kind. वासवर-वासगृह, a sleeping apartment. सुमिण-स्वप्न, a dream. जहा- मेहस्स....जाव सुबाहुकुमारे. queen धारिणी saw a lion in her dream. She gave birth to a son named Subahu....who attained to youth. The narration from the point of धारिणी's dream to Subahu's attaining youth is identical with that in the story of मेह given in नायाधम्मकहायो. अलंभोगसमत्थ-अलंभोगसमर्थ, fully capable of worldly enjoyments, in the full spring of life.

200. सदह-श्रद्धा, to have faith or trust in. निगन्थं पावयणं-निगन्थं प्रावचनं, the Jain Sacred Scriptures. पञ्चाणुव्वइय सत्तसिक्खावइय- गिहिवम्म-पञ्चाणुव्रतिक सत्तशिक्षाव्रतिक गृहिधर्मः—There is a reference here to the twelve vows of a Jain house-holder. Jainism puts before its followers "liberation" as the highest ideal of mankind. This liberation is to be achieved by Right Faith, Right Knowledge and Right Conduct put together. When the house-holder comes to have Right Faith, it transforms his knowledge into Right Knowledge, and leads him to Right Conduct. The Right Conduct of a house-holder assumes the form of अणु, गुण and शिक्षा vows, which comprise five, three and four kinds respectively.

अणुव्रत (the lesser vows) are :—

- (1) Avoidance of gross injury;
- (2) Avoidance of falsehood;
- (3) Avoidance of theft;
- (4) Avoidance of incelibacy; and
- (5) Avoidance of the love of property or possessions.

These vows are called " lesser vows " because a house-holder has to observe them only partially and not thoroughly. It is only the monks who can observe these vows in their entirety. So the same vows are called महाव्रत or "greater vows", when practised by monks. The difference between the vows of a house-holder and those of a monk will be clear if we take the case of the 4th and the 5th vows. The 4th vow is of observing celibacy. But a house-holder cannot observe celibacy in its entirety. He is, therefore, enjoined to abstain from sexual intercourse with any woman other than his wife. He can have sexual intercourse with his wife and still keep his vow of celibacy intact. So the 4th vow, in the case of a householder, is also called स्वदारसंतोषव्रत (contentment in one's wife). The 5th vow is the avoidance of the desire of possessions. It is possible for a monk and not for a house-holder to abandon all property. The house-holder can put some limit to his property, which constitutes his fifth vow. In the case of a house-holder, therefore, the 5th vow is called परिग्रहप्रमाण.

The गुणव्रत are so called because they tend to increase the virtue or merit of the अणुव्रत (अनुवृहणाद् गुणानाम्). The three गुणव्रत are—दिग्व्रत, अनर्थदण्डव्रत and भोगोपभोगपरिमाणव्रत:—

(1) दिग्व्रत is the determination of not travelling beyond a certain limit in the 10 directions.

(2) अनर्थदण्डव्रत is the refraining from wanton activity likely to cause injury to others. It has 5 sub divisions:—

- (i) पापोपदेश, i. e., giving evil lessons such as narrating accounts having reference to acts of cruelty to lower forms of life, swindling and the like to others.
- (ii) हिंसादान, i. e., giving of the means of injury such as a battle-axe, a sword, fire, weapons and the like.
- (iii) अपध्यान, i. e., wrongful meditation such as wishing, from motives of love or hatred, of destruction and imprisonment, etc., to others.
- (iv) दुःश्रुति, i. e., listening to books dealing with daring crimes, false doctrines, hatred, love, pride, and sex-passion which disturb the mind.
- (v) प्रमादचर्या, i. e., careless activity such as dealing in water, fire and destroying of plant etc., without purpose.

(3) भोगोपभोगपरिमाणव्रत means the vow of putting limitation on the choice of the objects of senses. Food, drink, and other objects which can be enjoyed only once are called भोग, and house and clothes etc., which can be enjoyed more than once are called उपभोग. To have a limit in respect of both these kinds of things is the 3rd गुणव्रत.

The 4 शिक्षाव्रतs are:—

(1) देशवकाशिकः—दिग्व्रत requires the house-holder to restrict his activities with reference to directions. देशवकाशिक further restricts his activities with reference to distance within the limits as to directions already laid down in दिग्व्रत. The object of both these vows is to gain the merit of not incurring any sin beyond the province of the limits.

(2) सामायिक is the refraining from the commission of sin for a particular period of time every day by engaging oneself in meditation.

(3) प्रोषधोपवास is abstaining from taking the four kinds of food for the whole day on the 8th and the 14th day of every fortnight.

(4) अतिथिसंविभाग is the service of monk, nun, layman and laywoman by the offering of food, medicine, clothes and residence etc.

The शिक्षाव्रतs or disciplinary vows are so called because they discipline the mind and keep one steady in religion. In the श्वेतांबर Cononical literature the गुणव्रतs are also included in the शिक्षाव्रतs and thus the number of the शिक्षाव्रतs is raised to 7.

The 5 अणुव्रतs (lesser vows), the 4 गुणव्रतs and the 4 शिक्षाव्रतs (disciplinary vows)—these 12 constitute the twelve-fold religion of a Jain house-holder.

पद्धिवन्ध-प्रतिवन्ध, delay.

VIVĀGASUYAM.

The First Part.

I. The story of Miyāputta.

1. In that age and at that time there was a city named Champā, (its description); and the temple Punnabhadda.

2. In that age and at that time the noble ascetic named Suhamma of high birth, (his description), the disciple of the revered Ascetic Mahāvira, who had studied the fourteen Pūrvas, who possessed the four kinds of knowledge, who was surrounded by 500 monks in successive order, (arrived at the place) where the temple Punnabhadda was (and having taken) a suitable (residence there, down to) passed his time. The congregation appeared, and having listened to the sermon, returned in that very direction from which it had appeared.

3. In that age and at that time, the venerable ascetic called Jambū, the revered Suhamma's disciple, who was seven cubits in height, just as the ascetic Goyama was, (down to) passed his time immersed in the treasure of meditation. Then the venerable ascetic called Jambū, in whom curiosity was aroused, went to where the revered ascetic Suhamma was, reverentially moved round him thrice, bowed and greeted him, (down to) waited upon him, and said the following—"If, sir, this matter of the tenth Anga, the Panhāvāgarana, has been preached by the revered Ascetic Mahāvīra (down to) who has attained (salvation),—what matter is preached, sir, of the eleventh Anga, the Vivāgasuyam, by the Ascetic (down to) who has attained (salvation)?"

4. Then the revered ascetic Suhamma spoke to the venerable ascetic Jambū thus—"Thus, verily, Jambū, the Ascetic (down to) who has obtained (salvation) has preached Vivāgasuyam, the eleventh Anga, in two parts. They are—'The fruits of bad acts' and 'The fruits of good acts.'" "If, sir, the Ascetic (down to) who has obtained (liberation) has preached Vivāgasuyam in two parts, viz., 'The fruits of bad acts' and 'The fruits of good acts,'—how many lessons, sir, of the part 'The fruits of bad acts' have been preached by the Ascetic (down to) who has obtained (liberation)?"

5. Then the revered ascetic Suhamma spoke to the ascetic Jambū thus "Thus, verily, Jambū, the first-preacher, the expounder,....

(down to) who has attained (emancipation), has narrated the 'Fruits of bad acts' in ten lessons. They are—Miyāputta, Ujjhuyāya, Abhigga, Sagada, Bahassai, Nandi, Umbara, Soriyadatta, Devadattā and Anjū."

6. If, sir, the Ascetic, ...the first preacher, the expounder, (down to) who has attained (liberation) has preached the 'Fruits of bad acts' in ten lessons, viz., Miyāputta, (down to) Anjū,—what matter, sir, of the first lesson in the 'Fruits of bad acts' has been preached by the Ascetic (down to) who has attained (liberation)"? Then the revered ascetic Suhamma spoke to the venerable ascetic Jambu—"Thus, verily, Jambū":—

7. In that age and at that time, there was a city named Miyaggama; (its description). Outside that city of Miyaggāma, in its northeastern direction, there was a garden named Chandanapāyava (abounding in flowers and fruits) of all seasons; (its description). In it there was a temple, very old like Punnabhadda, which was consecrated to the Jakkha Suhamma.

8. In that city of Miyaggāma, there dwelt a Khattiya king named Vijaya; (his description).
That Khattiya Vijaya had a queen named Miyā, who was perfect (in all her limbs;—her description). That Khattiya Vijaya had, born of his queen Miyā, a son named Miyāputta who was from birth blind, dumb, deaf, lame, deformed and paralytic. That boy had neither hands, nor feet, nor ears, nor eyes, nor nose; of all these limbs he had simply the forms and nothing but forms. That queen Miyā, therefore, used to attend on that boy Miyāputta, with food and drink, secretly in a secret underground cell.

9. In that city of Miyaggāma, there lived a certain man who was blind from birth. With his head prominently marked by dishevelled hair, with his path followed by a big swarm of bees, and being led by a person having eyes with a stick held in front of him, that man used to earn his livelihood in the city of Miyaggama by creating a feeling of compassion for himself at every house.

10. In that age and at that time the revered Ascetic Mahāvīra (down to) arrived there (down to) the congregation appeared. Then that warrior Vijaya, having obtained this intelligence, appeared and (down to) waited upon (Mahāvīra) just as Kūniya had done.

11. Then that man who was blind from birth, having heard the loud clamour of the crowd (etc.) spoke to the man having eyes thus:—

“Oh, you, beloved of gods! is there today, in the city of Miyaggāma, a festival in honour of Indra or anything else (down to, that the crowd) is setting forth?” Then the man (having eyes) spoke to the man who was blind from birth thus:—“Oh you, beloved of gods! there is no festival in honour of Indra or anything else (down to that the crowd) is setting forth. But verily, oh, beloved of gods! the Ascetic (down to) has arrived here; and indeed that is why they (down to) are setting forth.” Then the blind man said to that man thus:—“Oh, beloved of gods, let us also go to the revered Ascetic (down to, and) wait upon him.” Then the man who was blind by birth, being led by that man with a stick in front of him, proceeded to where the revered Ascetic Mahāvīra was; reverentially went round him thrice, bowed and greeted him (down to, and) waited upon him. Then the revered Ascetic Mahāvīra delivered a religious discourse to the warrior Vijaya and to that (congregation, down to) the congregation dispersed and Vijaya too went away.

12. In that age and at that time an ascetic named Indabhū, the seniormost disciple of the revered Ascetic Mahāvīra, (down to) was there. Then that revered Goyama saw that man who was blind by birth; and a curiosity being aroused in him, he spoke thus—"Is there, sir, any other man who is totally blind by birth?"

"Yes, there is." "How, sir, is that man totally blind by birth?"

"Thus verily, Goyama—In this very city of Miyaggāma, there is a boy named Miyāputta, son of the warrior Vijaya, born of his queen Miyā, who is totally blind by birth. He has no (hands, down to) and is possessed of merely the forms. So the queen Miyā (down to) looks after (him). Then that revered Goyama bowed and greeted the revered Ascetic Mahāvira and spoke thus—"Revered sir, being permitted by you, I wish to see the boy Miyāputta". "As you please, oh, beloved of gods."

13. Then that revered Goyama, being allowed by the revered Ascetic Mahāvira, and being pleased and satisfied, started from the the revered Ascetic Mahāvira. Without making haste (down to) and seeing that the ground before him was clean, he went in the direction of the town Miyaggāma, and through the midst of the town Miyaggāma he went to where the residence of queen Miyā was.

14. Then that queen Miyā saw the revered Goyama coming; having done so and being delighted and pleased (down to) she spoke thus—

“Tell me, oh, beloved of gods, what is the purpose of your arrival (here).” Then that revered Goyama spoke to queen Miyā thus,— “Verily, oh, beloved of gods, I have come here without making any delay, to see your son.”
 Then the queen Miyā decorated with all ornaments her four sons who were born after her son Miyāputta; and having done so, she made them fall at the feet of the revered Goyama; and having done so, spoke thus—“See these, sir, my sons.”

15. Then the revered Goyama spoke to Miyā thus—“Oh beloved of gods, verily, it is not to see these sons of yours that I have come here without making any delay. Verily, I have come here, without making any delay, to see that eldest son of yours called Miyāputta, who is totally blind by birth and on whom you are attending secretly with food and drink in a secret under-ground cell.” Then the queen Miyā spoke to Goyama thus—“oh, Goyama! indeed who is he, possessing such knowledge and austerities, that has quickly disclosed to you this secret story of mine, and from whence you have come to know it?” Then the revered Goyama spoke to queen Miyā thus—“Verily, oh beloved of gods, it is from the revered Ascetic Mahāvīra, my religious preceptor, that I have come to know this."

16. While queen Miyā was talking about this thing with revered Goyama, the time for the boy Miyāputta's meal was already overdue. Then that queen Miyā spoke to revered Goyama thus:—"You just wait here, sir, so that I may show the boy Miyāputta to you" So saying, she went to the room for food and drink; and having done so, she changed her dress; and having done so, she took a wooden cart; and having done so, she filled it with plenty of food, drink, eatables and relishes; having done so and dragging the wooden cart (with her) she went to the place where revered Goyama was; and having done so, she spoke to revered Goyama thus—"Come along, sir, and follow me, so that I may show the boy Miyāputta to you." Then that revered Goyama followed queen Miyā.

17. Then that queen Miyā, dragging the wooden cart with her, went to the place where the under-ground cell was; and having done so she covered her mouth with a four-folded piece of cloth. While she was covering her mouth, she spoke to Goyama thus—"Oh, sir, you too cover your mouth with a mouth-cloth." Then that revered Goyama, being thus spoken by queen Miyā, covered his mouth with a mouth-cloth.

18. Then that queen Miyā, with her face turned back, opened the door of the underground cell, from which, then, issued forth an ill-smell, It was like (the smell of) the dead body of a serpent, or like that of the dead body of a reptile (down to); in fact the smell is described to have been much more stinking than that. Then that boy Miyāputta,—to whom the smell of the plenty of food, drink, eatables and relishes was irresistible,—and who was infatuated by the plenty of food, drink, eatables and relishes,—ate the plenty of food etc., with his mouth. And having done so, he very quickly digested them. And having done so, he afterwards turned them into pus and blood, which pus and blood, too, he devoured.

19. Then, seeing that boy Miyāputta, this thought [5] of the following description arose in revered Goyama—"Alas! this boy experiences the peculiar maturity of the bitter fruit of wicked, ill-done, evil and sinful deeds done in the remote past. I have not seen hells or hell-beings. But, verily, this man is actually suffering pain similar to that in hell." Thinking thus he took his leave of queen Miyā; and having done so, he departed from the house of queen Miyā; having done so he went out right through the city of Miyaggāma; and having done so he went to the place where the revered Ascetic Mahāvīra was; and having done so he reverentially went round the revered Ascetic Mahāvīra thrice; and having done so he bowed and greeted him; and having done so he spoke thus—"Thus indeed, with your permission, I entered the midst of the city of Miyaggāma; and having done so, I went in the direction of queen Miyā's residence. Then that queen Miya saw me going, and having seen (me) became delighted, (the rest to be repeated down to) devoured the pus and blood. Then this thought arose in me—"Alas! this boy experiences (the rest to be repeated), oh revered sir! who was this man in his former existence?...In what village or in what town (was he born)? Having given what or having enjoyed what, having done what or (in consequence) of what (deeds done) in the past (down to experiences...the bitter fruit etc.)?" Calling Goyama by name, the revered Ascetic spoke to Goyama thus—"Thus, indeed, Goyama."

20. In that age and at that time, in this very country of Bhārāha in the continent of Jambuddīva, there was a city named Sayaduvāra, which was rich, peaceful and prosperous; (its description). In that city of Sayaduvāra there was a king named Dhanavāi; (his description). Neither very far from nor very near that city of Sayaduvāra, in its south-eastern direction, there was a small town named Vijayavaddhamāna which was rich, peaceful and prosperous. The jurisdiction of the town of Vijayavaddhamāna extended over five hundred villages. The District-officer of that town Vijayavaddhamāna was named Ikkāi who was impious (down to) and was taking delight in evil acts. That District-officer Ikkāi ruled over the five hundred villages (under the jurisdiction) of Vijayavaddhamāna (down to) and protected them.

✓ 21. Then that Ikkāi used to harass, kill, threaten, beat and impoverish (the people of) the five hundred villages under (the jurisdiction of) the town Vijayavaddhamāna by means of many taxes, heavy taxes, interests, bribes, insults, compulsory contributions, punitive taxes, extortions at the point of sword, maintaining thieves, setting on fire, and (maintaining) thieves who killed way-farers. With regard to many transactions, consultations, counsels, secrets, decisions and law-suits of many chieftains, courtiers, village-officers, family-heads, merchants, caravans of merchants, and of many other villagers,—Ikkai, having heard a thing, used to say that he did not hear it, and without having heard a thing he used to say that he did hear it. Similar was the case of his seeing, speaking, accepting or knowing (anything). Then that District-officer Ikkāī, who did such acts, whose acts were mostly such, who knew (how to do) such acts, and whose conduct was such, passed his days in acquiring (a store of) many sinful and wicked deeds.

22. Then, once, the District-officer Ikkāī's body was attacked at one and the same time by sixteen diseases, namely,— asthma, cough, fever, inflation, belly-ache, fistula, piles, indigestion, a disease of the eyes, head-ache, loss of appetite, sore-eyes, ear-disease, itching, dropsy and leprosy.

Then that District-officer Ikkāī, who was attacked by sixteen diseases, called his domestic servants; and having done so he spoke to them thus:—"Go hence, you beloved of gods! and proclaiming very loudly—in places where four roads meet; in places where three roads meet, in squares, in places where more than four roads meet, in high roads and in paths—say thus: 'Oh, you, beloved of gods, here, in the body of the District-officer Ikkāī, have appeared sixteen diseases, namely, asthma, cough, fever, (down to) leprosy. Therefore, oh, beloved of gods, the District-officer Ikkaī will give plenty of money as a gift to any physician or physician's son, any skilled man or his son, any surgeon or surgeon's son, who may wish to cure even one of those sixteen diseases of the District-officer Ikkaī. Proclaim this a second time and a third time, and report (to me the execution of) this order. Then the domestic servants (down to) reported (etc.).

✓ 23. Then, having heard the proclamation of this description in the town of Vijayavaddhamana, many physicians (etc., 6), came out of their respective houses, with the bags of their surgical instruments in their hands; and having done so they went through the midst of the city of Vijayavaddhamana to the residence of the District-officer Ikkaī; and having done so they examined the body of the District-officer Ikkaī; and having done so they asked what the cause of those diseases was; and having done so they wished to cure at least one of those sixteen diseases by many means, (viz.,)—smearing the body with oil, rubbing the body with perfumes, drinking of (i. e. making to drink) oily substances, vomitting, purging, fomenting, medicated bath, oily enema, enema, purging with a clyster, piercing veins (for bleeding), cutting, abrading, applying oil to the head, tonics, drugs, barks, roots, bulbous roots, leaves, flowers, fruits, seeds, herbs, pills, medicines consisting of one article, and medicines consisting of more than one article. But they were not able to cure (even one of the diseases). Then, when those many physicians and sons of physicians (etc.) were not able to cure even one of the sixteen diseases, they became tired, wearied and exhausted, and returned in that very direction from which they had appeared.

24. Then that District-officer Ikkaī, who was abandoned by the physicians (6), who was left by his attendants, in whose case medicines proved ineffective, who was attacked by sixteen diseases, and who was infatuated by the kingdom, the country, (down to) and the harem, who—enjoying the kingdom and the country, wished, sought and longed for them, who was distressed, who was distressed by misery and who was distressed by helplessness, and who lived a long life of two hundred and fifty years, having died at the time of death,—was born as a hell-being in that region of hell called Rayanappabha, where the maximum duration of life is one Sāgarovama period. Then having come out from there he entered as a son in the womb of Miya, queen of the warrior Vijaya, in this very City of Miyaggama.

25 Then in the body of that queen Miya, there appeared pain which was excessive (down to) and unbearable. Ever since the boy Miyaputta entered the womb of queen Miya in the form of a fetus, she became unpleasant, unbeloved, unwholesome, devoid of charm, and disagreeable to Vijaya.

26. Then, once, during the latter part of the first half of the night, while queen Miya was keeping awake, on account of family anxieties, this thought of the following description arose in her mind—"Indeed, formerly I was liked (6), thought of, trusted and approved of by the warrior Vijaya. But ever since this child has entered my womb in the form of a foetus, I have become unpleasant (down to) and disagreeable to the warrior Vijaya. He does not wish even to utter my own or my family name, then what of meeting or keeping company with me? Therefore it is better to effect the fall of this embryo of mine by abortion, felling, dropping or killing." So she thought, and having thought so she ate and drank many caustic, bitter and astringent substances which cause abortion, wishing (cheraby) to cause the fall of that foetus. That foetus, however, did not fall. When that queen Miya was unable to effect abortion of that foetus, she became tired, wearied and fatigued, and bore that foetus unwillingly and helplessly and with great pain.

27. Even while in the womb, that boy had eight arteries flowing inside, eight arteries flowing outside, eight flowing pus and eight carrying blood, two and two (flowing pus and blood respectively) in the ears, two and two in the eyes, two in the nose, two and two between the veins; —every moment they were flowing pus and blood. Even while in the womb, a disease called Aggia appeared in him. Whatever that boy ate, was immediately digested and turned into pus and blood; and that pus and blood too, the boy devoured.

28. Then, on a certain day, when full nine months were completed, that queen Miyā gave birth to a son who was from birth blind (down to) nothing but forms. Then that queen Miyā saw that boy to be deformed and totally blind; having done so she became frightened (4), and called a mother-like nurse, and having done so she spoke to her thus—“ Oh, you, beloved of gods, go and abandon this boy in a corner on a dung-hill ” Then, saying ‘ as your ladyship commands ’, that mother-like nurse responded to these words of queen Miya; and having done so, she went to the place where the warrior

Vijaya was; and having done so, with folded hands..... she spoke to him thus:—"Thus, verily, my lord, queen Miyā (after completing full nine months.....down to) nothing but forms. Then that queen Miyā saw him to be deformed and totally blind; and having done so and becoming afraid, terrified, dejected and frightened, she called me; and having done so she spoke to me thus—"Oh, you, beloved of gods, go and abandon this boy in a corner on a dung-hill." Therefore, let your lordship command me whether I should abandon that boy in a corner or not."

29 Then that warrior Vijaya, hearing these words of the mother-like nurse and also becoming confounded, got up; and having done so went to the place where queen Miyā was; and having done so, spoke to queen Miyā thus—"Oh, beloved of gods, this is your first child. If you abandon it in a corner on a dung-hill, your issues will not be long-lived. Therefore attend on this child secretly with food and drink in a secret under-ground cell. Thereby your issues will be long-lived". Then that queen Miyā, saying 'as you command,' respectfully promised to do accordingly; and having done so she attended on that boy secretly with food and drink in a secret under-ground cell.

30. Thus, indeed, Oh, Goyama, the boy Miyāputta experiences the fruit of deeds (down to) done in the past."

31. "Having died, when the time of death comes, where, oh, sir, the boy Miyāputta will go? where will he be born?" "Oh, Goyama! having lived his maximum life of twenty-six years and having died when the time of death comes, the boy Miyāputta will be born as a lion in a family of lions at the foot of the mountain Veyaddha in this very country of Bhārāha in the continent of Jambuddīva. There he will be an impious (down to) and adventurous lion; and will acquire (a store of) many sinful.....deeds; having done so and having died when the time of death comes, he will be born in that region of hell called Rāyanappabhā where the maximum duration of life is one Sāgarovama period. Then, afterwards having come out from there, he will be born among reptiles. Having died there he will be born in the second hell where the maximum duration of life is three sāgarovamas. Then, afterwards having come out from there, he will be born among birds. Having died there also, he will be born in the third hell.....seven sāgarovams. Thereafter he (will be born as) a lion, thereafter in the fourth (hell), (then as) a reptile, (then in) the fifth (hell, then as) a woman, (then in) the sixth (hell), (then as) a man, (then) below in the seventh (hell). Thereafter being born several hundreds of thousand times in each of the twelve and a half hundred thousand places of birth in crores of these chief families of aquatic creatures of lower species possessing five sense-organs such as a fish, a tortoise, a crocodile, a shark, a 'sumsumāra' crocodile etc.,—he will be born there again and again. Thereafter he will similarly be born several hundreds of thousand times among quadrupeds, reptiles creeping on the belly, reptiles creeping on hands, birds, four-sensed living beings, three-sensed living beings, two-sensed living beings, plants, bitter plants, plants having bitter milk-like juice, wind-embodied beings, fire-embodied beings, aquatic lives and earth-embodied beings. Then, coming out therefrom, he will be born as a bull in the city of Supaitṭha. Then having attained to youth and having suffered death,—being crushed under the bank of the great river Ganges, while once engaged in digging up a lump of earth high up on its bank during the early days of the rainy season,—he will be born as a male human being in the family of a merchant in that very city. Leaving behind boyhood and attaining to youth there, and having listened to religious discourses from worthy ascetics, he will become a monk, giving up house-holdership and accepting house-lessness. There he will practise monkhood, moving with care and attention, (down to) observing celibacy. Having practised asceticism for many years there, having confessed his faults and vowed to refrain from them, and having suffered death while engrossed in meditation when the time of death will approach, he will be born as a god in the Sohamma heaven. Afterwards dropping down from there, he will be born in (one of the) rich families in the Mahāvidheha country, just as Dadhāpaina (had done); the same description (to be reproduced here); (like him he will learn) the arts, (down to) will be liberated. Thus, verily, Jambu, this matter of the first lesson in “Fruits of bad acts” has been preached by the revered Ascetic Mahāvīra who has attained (down to liberation). Thus I say”.

2. The story of Ujjhiyaya.

32. "If, sir, this matter of the first lesson in the 'Fruits of bad acts' has been preached by the Ascetic (down to) who has attained (emancipation),—what matter is preached, sir, of the second lesson in the 'Fruits of bad acts' by the Ascetic (down to) who has attained (emancipation)?" Then the revered ascetic Suhamma spoke to the venerable ascetic Jambu thus—"Thus, verily, Jambu"—

33. In that age and at that time, there was a city named Vāṇiyagāma which was rich, peaceful and prosperous. Outside that Vāṇiyagāma, in its north-eastern direction, there was a garden named Duīpalāsa. In that Duīpalāsa, there was a temple consecrated to the Jakkha Suhamma. In that Vāṇiyagāma, there was a king named Mitta; (his description). That king Mitta had a queen named Sirī; (her description).

34. In that Vāṇiyagāma there was a courtesan named Kāmajjhayā,—who was perfect (in all her limbs, down to) and beautiful, who was proficient in the seventy-two arts, who possessed the courtesan's sixty-five qualities, who dallied in twenty-nine different ways, who was devoted to twenty-one qualities of dalliance, who was clever in serving the man in thirty-two ways, in whom the nine sense-organs which had been dormant (before she attained to youth) were fully awakened, who was proficient in eighteen vernaculars, who wore a fine dress expressive of love, who was proficient in singing, dallying, music and dancing, whose gait was appropriate, whose breasts were beautiful, whose flag (of reputation as a courtesan) was flying high, whose fee (for the night) was one thousand (gold coins), who was given the honour of (being allowed to use) an umbrella, chowries and fans of hair, who moved in a small chariot, and who enjoyed the leadership of many thousands of courtesans.

35. In that Vāṇiyagāma there lived a merchant named Vijayamitta who was wealthy.....That Vijayamitta had a wife named Subhaddā who was perfect (in all her limbs...). That Vijayamitta had, born of his wife Subhaddā, a son named Ujjhiyaya who was perfect (down to) and handsome.

36. In that age and at that time, the revered Ascetic Mahāvīra arrived there. The congregation appeared. The king (too) set forth just as Kuṇḍiya had done (formerly). The sermon was delivered. The congregation returned; and the king went away.

37. In that age and at that time the revered Ascetic Mahāvīra's seniormost disciple, the ascetic named Indabhuī, (down to, who possessed concentrated in his body an immense illuminating) power, and (who was purifying his soul) by taking (only) the sixth meal, as described in Pannattī, (studied the sacred texts) in the first (quarter of the day, and having followed the daily routine of the second and the third quarters and taking his Master's permission for proceedings to beg alms) went in the direction in which Vāṇiyagāma was situated; having done so and wandering (for begging alms from house to house) high and low, he entered into a main street. There he saw many elephants, which were armed, which had armours put on them, which were dressed in cloak-like armours, which had their chest-bands fastened, whose bells were suspended, whose upper garments and various ornaments on the neck were set with diverse gems and jewels, which were well-equipped, which wore excellent banners and flags and five excellent crest-garlands, which

✓ had conductors on their backs, and which were equipped with weapons and arms. There he saw many horses also, which were armed, which had armours put on them, which were dressed in cloak-like armours, which had ornamental cloaks put on them, whose armours were suspended, which wore upper garments, whose faces were terrific on account of small chowries, whose waists were decorated with small mirrors, which had horse-men on their backs, and which were equipped with weapons and arms. There he saw many men also, who were armed, who had put on armours, whose bow-sticks were tied fast, who wore ornaments on their necks, who wore fine white turbans marked with emblems, and who were equipped with weapons and arms. In the midst of those men he saw a man, who was bending with neck behind being tied down, whose ears and nose were cut off, whose body was besmeared with oil, who was dressed in a pair of rough clothes fit for an offender, who wore a rope and a garland of red flowers round his neck, whose body was covered with dust, who was frightened, to whom life was dear though he was condemned to death, from whose body pieces of flesh as small as the grains of sesamum were cut, who was made to eat pieces of flesh (cut out from his own body) as small as the Gunjā fruit, who was miserable. on whom hundreds of strokes of the whip were inflicted, who was surrounded by many men and women, and who was being proclaimed with the beating of a broken drum in every square. He (Indabhui) heard this proclamation of this description—"Verily, oh, beloved of gods, neither king nor prince has wronged the boy Ujjhiyaya but his own actions have wronged him."

38. Then, on seeing that man, this thought (5) occurred to the revered Goyama—"Alas, this man (down to) experiences pain similar to that in hell" Thus thinking and wandering from house to house, high, low and middle, he accepted sufficient alms. Having done so he (went out) right through the city of Vāṇiyagāma (down to, and) showed (the alms to his Master); having done so he bowed and greeted the revered Ascetic Mahāvīra; and having done so he spoke thus—"Thus indeed, sir, with your permission I (entered the midst of the city of) Vāṇiyagāma (down to) similarly experiences (etc.). Oh, revered sir, who was this man in his former existence (down to) experiences...?" "Thus, indeed, Goyama."

✓ 39. In that age and at that time, in this very country of Bhārāha in the continent of Jambuddīva, there was a city named Hatthināura which was rich,...In that city of Hatthināura there was a king named Sunanda who was (powerful like the mountain) Mahāhimavat...In the innermost region of that Hatthināura, there was a big cow-pen. It was supported on hundreds of pillars and was pleasant (4). There dwelt happily, with plenty of grass and water and free from fear and danger, many cattle of the city, many cows of the city, many oxen of the city, many bulls of the city, and many calves of the city, having masters and having no masters.

✓ 40. In that city of Hatthināura there was a cattle-lifter named Bhīma who was impious (down to) and who was taking delight in evil acts. That cattle-lifter Bhīma had a wife named Uppalā who was perfect (in all her limbs,...). Once that Uppalā, the wife of the cattle-lifter, became pregnant. When three months (of her pregnancy) were fully completed, that Uppalā, the wife of the cattle-lifter, had this pregnancy-desire of the following description:—"Blessed, indeed, are those mothers (4; down to-they alone) have well-earned the fruit of their birth and life who satisfy their pregnancy-desire by tasting, enjoying and eating wine, wine prepared from 'honey, the 'palm-fruit' wine, the 'white' wine, the 'sīhu' wine, the 'grape' wine, (mixed) with the udders, breasts, testicles, tails, humps, shoulders, ears, eyes, noses, tongues, lips, dew-laps,—(together with pieces of meat) roasted on pike, fried in oil, baked, dried up and salted,—of the cattle of the city, (down to) bulls, having masters (and having no masters). Thus contemplating, and by reason of this pregnancy-desire remaining unsatisfied, she became emaciated, hunger-stricken, fleshless, diseased in body, devoid of lustre, miserable and distracted in appearance, and pale-faced; her lotus-like eyes and face became withered; ceasing to enjoy suitable flowers, dress, scents, garlands, ornaments and food, she (became) like a lotus-garland withered in hands; and (the desire of her heart) remaining unsatisfied... she went on contemplating.

41. Now the cattle-lifter Bhīma went to the place where his wife Uppalā was; and having done so, he saw her... unsatisfied (the rest as above), and spoke thus—"Oh, you, beloved of gods, why are you down-cast...and meditating?" Then that wife Uppalā spoke to the cattle-lifter Bhīma thus:—"Thus, verily, oh, you, beloved of gods, three months (of my pregnancy) being fully completed, (this) pregnancy-desire has arisen in me—"Blessed, indeed, are those (mothers...) who satisfy their pregnancy-desire by tasting (3) wine (6) (mixed) with the udders (down to.....together with pieces of flesh...and) salted—of many cattle'. Therefore, oh, beloved of gods, this pregnancy-desire being unfulfilled, I have become.....meditative”.

42. Then the cattle-lifter Bhīma spoke to his wife Uppalā thus—“ Oh, you, beloved of gods, do not be meditative (by reason of your pregnancy-desire being) unfulfilled...I shall do that, whereby your pregnancy-desire will be accomplished”. With these sweet (5) words he consoled her. Then, at the time of midnight, that cattle-lifter Bhīma, alone and without any companion, went out of his house, armed (down to) and with weapons. Having done so he went right through the city of Hatthunāura, to the place where the cow-pen was. (There) he cut off the udders of some of the many cattle of the city, (down to and) of bulls, (down to), he cut off the dew-laps of some, and he cut off various limbs of some; having done so he went to where his house was; and having done so, he presented them to his wife Uppalā. Then that Uppalā, his wife, satisfied her pregnancy-desire by tasting wine (5) with the flesh of many cows etc., baked on pike etc. Then, that Uppalā, the wife of the cattle-lifter, whose pregnancy-desire was satisfied, respected, fulfilled, cut off and accomplished, bore that foetus with great happiness.

43. Then at a certain time, when full nine months (of her pregnancy) were completed, that Uppalā, the wife of the cattle-lifter, gave birth to a son. The very moment the child was born—it cried aloud with a very great noise, making a shrieking and unpleasant sound. Then hearing the sound produced by the boy, many cattle of the city (down to) and bulls in the town of Hatthunāura became frightened.....and agitated and ran away in all directions. Then, the parents of that boy gave him this name of the 'following description: "As this son of ours gave out a very loud, shrieking and unpleasant cry, the very moment he was born, and as on hearing the boy's cry, many city-cattle in the town of Hatthi-nāura (down to) became frightened (4) and ran away in all directions, so let this son of ours be named Gottāsaa (-' cattle-frightener')". Then that boy Gottāsaa left behind his boyhood.

44. Then, at a certain time, the cattle-lifter Bhīma met with death. Then that boy Gottāsaa weeping, crying and lamenting and being surrounded by many friends, kinsmen, near ones, acquaintances, relatives and servants, removed the dead body of the cattle-lifter Bhīma; and having done so, he performed the various wordly funeral rites. Then, one day, that king Sunanda himself appointed the boy Gottāsaa as the cattle-lifter. Then that boy Gottāsaa, being appointed as the cattle-lifter, became impious (down to) and took delight in evil acts.

45. Then, by reason of his being the cattle-lifter, that boy Gottāsaa, every day, at the time of midnight, went out of his house alone and unaccompanied, dressed in armour (down to) and equipped with weapons and arms; having done so he went to the place where the cow-pen was; having done so, of many cattle of the city, having masters(.....down to) he cut off the limbs; and having done so, he went to the place where his house was. Then that cattle-lifter Gottāsaa used to taste etc. wine etc (6) (mixed) with the flesh of many cows (etc.) baked on pike (etc.). Then that cattle-lifter Gottāsaa, whose acts were such,.....having acquired (a store of) many sinful deeds, having lived a long life of five hundred years, and becoming miserable and distressed, met with death when the time of death approached; (and after death) was born as a hell-being in the second hell where the maximum duration of life is three Sāgarovamas.

46. Now, the merchant Vijayamitta's wife named Subhaddā used to give birth to children which were still-born (or which died immediately after birth). All her children died immediately after birth (or were born dead). Then that cattle-lifter Gottūśaa, having afterwards come out of the second hell, took birth, in this very city of Vāṇiyagāma, as a male being in the womb of the merchant Vijayamitta's wife Subhaddā. Then one day, when nine months (of her pregnancy) were fully completed, that Subhaddā, the wife of the merchant, gave birth to a son.

47. Then that Subhaddā, the merchant's wife, caused that boy, immediately after he was born, to be abandoned in a corner on a dunghill; having done so, she caused him to be brought back; and having done so, she reared him up in due course, protecting and nursing him. Then the parents of that boy performed the rites (connected with the birth of a child) namely of 'wishing long life for the child,' 'exposing the child to the sun and the moon' and 'keeping awake' with costly presents as marks of honour. Then, when the eleventh day (of the birth of the child) was over and the twelfth day approached, the parents of the child gave him this significant name, in accordance with attributes, of the following description—"As this son of ours was abandoned in a corner on a dung-hill immediately after his birth, so let his name be Ujjhiyaya ('abandoned')." Then that boy Ujjhiyaya grew up happily and without any obstacle, like Dadhapainna (of former days), being taken care of by five nurses,—namely, the milk-nurse, the bath-nurse, the play-nurse and the lap-nurse,—just as a ‘champaka’ plant does in the sheltered place of a mountain-valley, unexposed to the wind and free from obstacles.

✓ 48. Then, once that merchant Vijayamitta set out in a boat to the Lavana (‘salt’) sea, having taken with him merchandise of four kinds, namely,—articles sold by counting, articles sold by weight, articles sold by measurement and articles sold by quality (i. e. after scrutiny). Then, his ship having been wrecked there in the Lavana sea, that Vijayamitta lost his valuable merchandise (in the sea) and met with death, being left without protection and shelter. Then many chieftens, courtiers, village-officers, family-heads, merchant-princes and merchants,—immediately on hearing that the merchant Vijayamitta and his valuable merchandise were thrown into the Lavana sea by reason of the ship-wreck and that he had met with death,—took deposits on hand and valuables other than deposits and ran away in secret places.

✓ 49. Then that Subhaddā, the merchant’s wife, heard that Vijayamitta and his valuable merchandise were cast away into the Lavana sea by reason of the ship-wreck and that he had met with death; having done so and being overcome by great grief for her husband, she fell on the ground all of a sudden with all her limbs like a Champaka plant cut off with an axe. Then, having consoled herself after a while, the merchant’s wife Subhaddā, weeping, crying and lamenting and being surrounded by many friends etc., performed the worldly funeral rites of the merchant Vijayamitta. Then, brooding on the crossing of the Lavana sea, the loss of the wealth, the wreck of the ship and the death of her husband, that Subhaddā, the merchant's wife, met with death one day.

✓ 50. Then the guards of the city, knowing that Subhaddā, the wife of the merchant, had died, turned the boy Ujjhiyaya out of his own house; and having done so they gave that house to some one else. Then that boy Ujjhiyaya, being turned out of his own house, grew up very happily in squares, (down to), paths, among gamblers, in the houses of harlots and in wine shops; and being unchecked, unobstructed, self-willed and wanton, he became addicted to drink, theft, gambling and harlots. Then, having one day come in contact with the harlot Kāmajjhayā, that boy Ujjhiyaya passed his days in enjoying many excellent human pleasures with the harlot Kāmajjhayā.

51. Then, Sirī, the queen of that king Vijayamitta, once suffered from a disease of the womb. King Vijayamitta was (therefore) unable to enjoy excellent human pleasures with his queen Sirī. Then, one day, that king Vijayamitta got the boy Ujjhiyaya turned out of the house of the courtesan Kāmajjhayā; having done so he kept the courtesan Kāmajjhayā as his own mistress; and having done so he passed his time, enjoying excellent human pleasures with the courtesan Kāmajjhayā.

52. Then that boy Ujjhiyaya, turned out of the house of the courtesan Kāmajjhayā, became greedy of her, deeply attached to her, infatuated by her, and completely absorbed in her; and not getting thought, pleasure or happiness in anything else,—with his thoughts engrossed in her, with his mind concentrated on her, with his soul tainted by thoughts about her, with his thoughts centred in her, trying to find means to obtain her. concentrating all his sense-organs on her, and completely under the influence of thoughts about her,—he passed his days waiting to find any opportunity, drawback or weak point (to meet) the courtesan Kāmajjhayā. Then, one day, that boy Ujjhiyaya found an opportunity to meet the courtesan Kāmajjhayā; and having found it, (—the opportunity) he secretly entered the house of the courtesan Kāmajjhayā; and having done so he passed his time, enjoying excellent human pleasures with the courtesan Kāmajjhayā.

53. Now, the king Mitta, after taking his bath (down to, performing) the expiatory rites, and decorating himself with all ornaments and being surrounded by a circle of men, went to the place where the house of the courtesan Kāmajjhayā was and having done so he saw there the boy Ujjhiyaya (enjoying) excellent (human) pleasures with the courtesan Kāmajjhayā; having done so and having got quickly exasperated (4), and having contracted his eyebrows so as to form three wrinkles on his forehead, he got the boy Ujjhiyaya captured by his attendants. Having done so, he made his body shattered and crushed by the strokes of bones, fists, knees and elbows; having done so he got him bound so as to make him bend down with neck behind; and having done so, he got the victim taken (to the place of execution) in this manner. “Thus, indeed, oh, Goyama, the boy Ujjhiyaya experiences (the peculiar maturity of the fruit of.....) acts done in the past.”

54. “Oh, revered sir! having met with death when the moment of death approaches, where will the boy

Ujjhiyaya go? Where will he be born?" "Oh, Goyama! having lived the maximum life of twenty-five years and having met with death when the moment of death approaches, being impaled on stake this very day when a third part of the day will be still remaining, the boy Ujjhiyaya will be born as a hell-being in the region of hell (called) Rāyapabbhā. Afterwards, coming out from there, he will be born as a monkey in a family of monkeys at the foot of the mountain Veyaddha in the country of Bhārāha in this very continent of Jambuddīva. There, after attaining to adolescence, he will become greedy of, deeply attached to, infatuated by and completely absorbed in the pleasures of lower animals, and will kill young ones (-his own and) of (other) monkeys as soon as born. Having performed such acts.....and having met with death when the time of death will approach, he will be born as a son in a family of courtesans in the city of Indapura in the country of Bhārāha in this very continent of Jambuddīva. Then, as soon as he is born, his parents will cut off his testicles and will teach him the profession of a eunuch. Then, on the twelfth day (of his birth), the parents of that boy will give him this name of the following description, namely, —“Let this son of ours be a eunuch named Piyasena,” Then, having left behind boyhood and attaining to youth, that eunuch Piyasena will become capable of understanding and of enjoying pleasures, and will be endowed with excellence of form, youth and beauty and with an excellent body. Then having brought under his influence many princes (down to,) and others in the city of Indapura by means of employment of charms, magic powders, maddening of hearts, concealments, attractions, captivating (of hearts), and bringing (of them) under (his) subordination,—that eunuch will pass his days enjoying excellent human pleasures.

55. Then that eunuch, whose acts will be such....., having acquired (a store of) many sinful deeds having lived the maximum life of twenty-one hundred years, and having met with death when the time of death will approach, will be born as a hell-being in the region of hell (called) Rāyanaṇṇapabbhā. After that (he will be born) among reptiles (then as) a 'sumsumāra' crocodile; similarly (he will pass through transmigrations as in the case of miyaputta) (down to) hell.....Afterwards, coming out from there, he will be born as a buffalo in the city of Champā in the country of Bhāraha in this very continent of Jambuddiva. There one day, being deprived of life by a member of an assembly of evil persons, he will be born as a son in a family of merchants in that very city of Champā. There, having passed the stage of boyhood..... (and having listened to religious discourses) from a worthy monk, (he will become) an ascetic (and will acquire) perfect knowledge;..... (will be born) in the Sohamma heaven (as described) in the first (lesson) (down to).....will put an end (to all miseries). The (usual) conclusion.

3. The story of Abhaggasena.

56. The (usual) introduction of the third (lessor).
“ Thus, verily, Jambu ”

57. In that age and at that time there was a city named Purimatāla, which was rich.....In the north-eastern direction of that city of Puimatāla, there was a garden (named) Amohadamsana. In it, there was a temple consecrated to the Jakkha Amchadaṃsi. In that (city of) Purimatāla there lived a king named Mahābala

58. On the border of that city of Purimatāla, in its north-eastern direction, there was situated a forest. In it there was a forest-settlement of thieves named Sālā,—which ✓ was situated in a corner of an impassable mountain-valley, which was encircled by an enclosure of a hedge of bamboos, which was surrounded by a trench formed by inaccessible precipices of mountains cut, which had border-lands where water was hardly to be found, which had many openings between hills, where only known persons could get in and go out from, and which was inaccessible even to an angry and big crowd

✓ 59. There in Sālā, the forest-settlement of thieves, there lived a leader of thieves named Vijaya,—who was impious, (down to) whose hands were blood-stained, whose fame (as a thief) had reached many cities, who was brave, whose strokes were heavy, who was adventurous, who could hit (invisible objects) by (merely hearing their) sounds, and who was a prominent warrior in wielding the sword. There, in the forest-settlement of thieves (called) Sālā, he enjoyed the leadership of five hundred thieves.

✓ 60. Then that Vijaya, the leader of thieves, was also shelter of many thieves, debauches, thieves who break open the knots of bundles, thieves who break open walls by cutting holes into them, and speculators, and of many other (persons such as) thieves whose limbs were cut off and broken, exiles and undesirable persons. Then that Vijaya, the leader of thieves, used to harass, to threaten, to beat, to deprive of their dwelling places, wealth and corn, and to inflict taxes on, the subjects on the north-eastern side of the city of Purimatāla by destroying many villages and towns, capturing cattle, taking persons captive, killing way-farers. and breaking open walls with spades; very frequently he used to receive taxes due to the king Mahābala.

61. That Vijaya, the leader of thieves, had a wife named Khandasirī, who was perfect.....That Vijaya, the leader of thieves, had, born of his wife Khandasirī, a son named Abhaggaseṇa, whose body was perfect in all the five limbs, who had attained to youth and had become capable of understanding and of enjoying pleasures.

62. In that age and at that time the revered Ascetic Mahāvīra arrived in the city of Purimatāla. The congregation appeared. The king set out. The sermon was delivered. The congregation and the king returned.

63. In that age and at that time, the revered Ascetic Mahāvīra's seniormost disciple, Goyama, (down to) entered on a main street. There he saw many elephants, many horses, and men who were armed and had put on armours. Amidst those men he saw a man who was bending down (being bound) with neck behind, (down to) and who was being proclaimed. Then, the royal officers made him to sit in the first square; having done so, they killed before him his father's eight younger brothers; having done so and giving him lashes of whips, they made him to eat piteously pieces of flesh as small as the Gunjā fruit; and having done so they made him to drink water in the form of blood. After that, in the second square, they killed before him the eight wives of his uncles (who were already killed). (They killed) similarly, in the third square, his father's eight elder brothers; in the fourth, the eight wives of his father's elder brothers; in the fifth, (his father's) sons (i. e., the brothers of the victim); in the sixth, (his father's) daughters-in-law; in the seventh, sons-in-law; in the eighth, daughters; in the ninth, grand-sons; in the tenth, grand-daughters; in the eleventh, the husbands of the grand-daughters; in the twelfth, the wives of the grand-sons; in the thirteenth, the husbands of his father's sisters; in the fourteenth, his father's sisters; in the fifteenth, the husbands of his mother's sisters; in the sixteenth, his mother's sisters; in the seventeenth, the wives of his maternal uncles; and in the eighteenth, they killed before him the remaining of his friends, kinsmen, near ones, acquaintances, relatives and servants; having done so and giving him lashes of whips, they made him to eat piteously pieces of flesh as small as the Gunja fruit; and having done so, they made him to drink water in the form of blood.

64. Then that revered Goyama saw that man; and having done so, this thought of the following description arose in him (down to) he returned in the same manner... and spoke (to Mahāvira) thus—"Thus, verily, revered sir, I.....(the rest to be repeated down to), oh, revered sir! who was this man in his former existence?.....(down to experiences.....the bitter fruit etc.)?" "Thus, indeed, Goyama."

65. In that age and at that time, in this very continent of Jambuddīva and in the country of Bhārāha, there was a city named Purimatāla which was rich..... In that city of Purimatāla, there lived a king named Udiodia (who was as powerful as the mountain) Mahāhimavat..... In that Purimatāla, there lived a dealer in eggs named Ninnāa who was rich (down to) and unsurpassed; and who was impious (down to) and took delight in evil acts. That Ninnāa's many men, who were paid either in cash or in food, every morning took (with them) spades and pairs of bamboo baskets attached at the two ends of poles; having done so they collected, in the neighbourhood of the city of Purimatāla, many eggs of female crows, female owls, female pigeons, 'titibhi' birds, female cranes, pea-hens and hens and those of many other creatures living in water, on the earth or in the sky etcetera; having done so they filled their baskets (with them); having done so they returned to the place where Ninnāa, the dealer in eggs, was; and having done so they offered them to Ninnāa, the dealer in eggs.

↓ 66. Then many men of that Ninnāa, the dealer in eggs, who were paid either in cash or in food, fried, roasted and baked the many eggs of female crows, (down to) hens and the eggs of many other creatures living in water, on the earth or in the sky etc, in frying pans, roasting pans, baking pans, earthen frying pans and on burning charcoal; and having done so they earned their livelihood by trading in the eggs in shops on the high road. That Ninnāa, the dealer in eggs, himself also, tasted and enjoyed wine..... with those many eggs of female crows, (down to) and hens, roasted, fried and baked.

67. Then that Ninnāa, whose acts were such (4), having acquired (a store of) many sinful deeds, having lived the maximum life of one thousand years, and having met with death when the time of death approached, was born as a hell-being among hell-beings in the third region of hell where the maximum duration of life is seven Sāgarovamas. Afterwards, having come out from there, he was born in this very forest-settlement of thieves (called) Sālā, as a son in the womb of Khandasirī, the wife of Vijaya, the leader of thieves.

✓ 68. Then, when three months (of her pregnancy) were over, that wife Khandasirī had once this pregnancy-desire of the following description: "Blessed, indeed, are those mothers who,—surrounded by the wives of friends, kinsmen, near ones, acquaintances, relatives and servants, and by the wives of many other thieves,—after taking their bath, offering oblations to deities, performing the expiatory rites and decorating themselves with all ornaments, pass their time in tasting and enjoying plenty of food, drink, eatables, relishes, wine and liquor;—and (blessed, indeed, are those mothers) who,—taking their meal and coming to the hall after taking their meal, dressing themselves in men's attire, putting on armours (down to) and equipping themselves with weapons and arms, with shields fastened to their hands, with swords drawn, with bows on their shoulders, with arrows drawn, with the 'dāmā' weapon brandished, with their thigh-bells suspended and hanging, with trumpets being played upon, making a very great and loud noise like that of the sea,—satisfy their pregnancy-desire, roaming and observing all over Sālā, the forest-settlement of thieves."

69. Now that Vijaya, the leader of thieves, saw his wife Khandasirī meditative etc., and having done so he spoke to her thus:—"Why are you, O beloved of gods, down-cast ...and meditative?" Then that Khandasirī spoke to Vijaya thus—"Thus, verily, O you, beloved of gods, three months of my (pregnancy being completed...down to) I have become contemplative." Then that Vijaya, the leader of thieves, having heard these words from his wife Khandasirī, gave a reply to his wife Khandasirī to the following effect—"As you please, O, you, beloved of gods."

70. Then that wife Khandasirī, being (thus) given permission by Vijaya, the leader of thieves, and being delighted and satisfied, took her bath (down to) and decorated herself and being surrounded by the wives of many friends (down to) and by the wives of many other thieves, passed her time in tasting (4) plenty of food (4) and wine (6). Taking her meal and coming (to the hall) after taking her meal, dressing herself in men's attire, putting on an armour, (down to) and roaming....., she satisfied her pregnancy-desire. Then that wife Khandasirī, whose pregnancy-desire was satisfied, respected, fulfilled, cut off and accomplished, bore that foetus very happily.

71. Then that wife of the leader of thieves, when nine months (of her pregnancy) were fully completed, gave birth to a son. Then that Vijaya, the leader of thieves, celebrated (the rites of) 'wishing long life for the child' (etc.) for ten nights. Then, on the eleventh day of the (birth of) the child, that Vijaya, the leader of thieves, got prepared plenty of food (4); having done so he invited his friends, kinsmen etc.; and having done so (down to) in the presence of those very friends, kinsmen etc., he spoke thus,—“As a pregnancy-desire of this type occurred (to his mother) when this son of ours was in the womb, so let this son of ours have the name Abhaggasana (—one whose army is invincible).” Then that boy Abhaggasena, (being nursed by) five nurses, (down to) grew up. Then that boy Abhaggasena passed the stage of boyhood. (He was married to) eight girls, (down to, and was presented with) gifts (of various articles) each numbering eight. He passed his time (enjoying pleasures) in a lofty palace.

72 Then, one day, that Vijaya, the leader of thieves, met with death. Then that boy Abhaggasena, surrounded by five hundred thieves and weeping, lamenting and crying, removed the dead body of Vijaya, the leader of thieves, with costly presents as marks of honour; having done so he performed many worldly funeral rites; and having done so he abated his grief after a few days.

✓ 73. Then one day, those five hundred thieves appointed the boy Abhaggasena to the leadership of the thieves with great (ceremony) in Sālā, the forest-settlement of thieves. Then that boy Abhaggasena became the leader of the thieves, and (becoming) impious (down to) he used to receive taxes (due to the king).

✓ 74. Then the subjects (of the king), being tormented by Abhaggasena, the leader of thieves, by the destruction of many villages, called each other (i. e. assembled together); and having done so, they spoke thus:—Thus, indeed, O, beloveds of gods, Abhaggasena, the leader of thieves, (is harassing.....down to) and depriving of their wealth the subjects on the north-eastern side of the city of Purimatāla by destroying many villages etc. Therefore, it is indeed better, O, beloveds of gods, to place this matter before king Mahābal in the city of Purimatāla. Then those subjects (of the king) agreed between themselves as to this matter; having done so they took with them presents which were rich, valuable, fit for the great and fit for a king; having done so they went to the city of Purimatāla; having done so they went to the place where king Mahābala was; having done so they offered the rich, (down to) presents to the king; and having done so, with folded hands, they spoke to king Mahābala thus:—“Thus, verily, O, lord, Abhaggaseṇa, the leader of thieves, (is tormenting us) by destroying many villages, (down to) and by depriving us of our wealth. Therefore, we wish, O, lord, to live happily and free from fear and danger, being supported by the shelter of your arms.” Thus saying they fell at his feet, and with folded hands, they made a request to king Mahābala respecting this matter.

75. Then that king Mahābala, hearing this account from those subjects, got quickly exasperated, (down to), blazed (with anger), contracted his eyebrows so as to form three wrinkles on the forehead and called the general (of his army); having done so he spoke to him thus:—“Go, you, O, beloved of gods, and lay siege to Sālā, the forest-settlement of thieves; having done so capture Abhaggaseṇa, the leader of thieves, alive; and having done so bring him to me.” Then that general responded to these words saying ‘yes,’ (i. e. as your lordship commands). Then that general, surrounded by many men who had put on armours (down-to, who were equipped) with arms and had shields fastened on their hands, went out right through the city of Purimatāla, producing a great (down to and) roaring ...noise (down to) with the beating of the 'chhippatura' drums; and having done so he proceeded to go to the place where Sālā, the forest-settlement of thieves, was.

76. Then the spies of that Abhaggasena, the leader of thieves, getting the intelligence of this thing, went to Sālā, the forest-settlement of thieves, and to the place where Abhaggasena, the leader of thieves, was; and having done so, with folded hands, they spoke to him thus:—"Thus, verily, O, beloved of gods, king Mahābala, in the city of Purimatāla, has ordered the general with his band of great warriors (thus)—"Go, you, O, beloveds of gods, lay siege to Sālā, the forest-settlement of thieves, capture Abhaggasena, the leader of thieves, alive; and having done so, bring him to me." Then that general, with his collection of great warriors, has left for the place where Sālā, the forest-settlement of thieves, is."

77. Then that Abhaggasena, the leader of thieves, having heard this account from those spies, summoned the five hundred thieves; and having done so he spoke (to them) thus—"Thus, indeed, O, beloveds of gods, in the city of Purimatāla, Mahābala, (down to) has left for coming (to Sālā...). Therefore, it is better for us, O, beloveds of gods, to check the general on the way before he reaches Sālā, our forest-settlement." Then those five hundred thieves, saying 'as you desire,' (down to) assented to Abhaggasena, the leader of thieves.

78. Then that Abhaggasena, the leader of thieves, got prepared plenty of food, drink, eatables and relishes; having done so and taking his bath (down to) and performing the expiatory rites, together with the five hundred thieves, he passed his time in tasting that plenty of food (4) and wine (6) in the dining hall. Taking his meal and coming to the hall after taking his meal, with his hands and face made clean with water, and becoming very clean, he put on wet leather covering, together with the five hundred thieves. Having done so and putting on armours (down to equipping himself) with arms, with (shields) fastened on hands (down to making) a roaring noise, he set out of Sālā, the forest-settlement of thieves, at the time of midnight. Having done so and taking food and water with him, and resorting to a difficult and impenetrable forest, he remained waiting for that army.

79. Then that army went to the place where Abhaggasena, the leader of thieves, was; and having done so, it met in a fight with Abhaggasena, the leader of thieves. Then that Abhaggasena, the leader of thieves, made that army killed and crushed (down to) and drove it away.

80. Then that general,—whose (men were) killed (down to) and repulsed by Abhaggasena, the leader of thieves,—who had become weak, helpless, powerless and devoid of effort and valour,—thinking that it was impossible to hold out, returned to the city of Purimatāla and went to the place where king Mahābala was; and having done so, with folded hands, he spoke to him thus:—“Thus, verily, my lord, Abhaggasena, the leader of thieves, has resorted to a difficult and impenetrable forest, taking food and water with him. It is not possible to overtake him in a close fight even by means of a very big host of horses or of elephants or of chariots, or even by means of the fourfold (army). Therefore he can be conquered only by creating confidence in him by means of conciliation, dividing and gifts. Those of his (men who are his) sham followers, who are in his confidence, who create dissensions among his friends, kinsmen, near ones, acquaintances, relatives and servants by (offering to them) plenty of wealth, gold, jewels, highly valuable articles and property, and who frequently send to Abhaggasena, the leader of thieves, rich, valuable and costly presents, can create confidence in Abhaggasena, the leader of thieves.

81. Then once that king Mahābala constructed, in the city of Purimatāla, a lofty and very big palace which was supported on hundreds of pillars and which was charming and beautiful. Then, one day, that king Mahābala declared (to be held), in the city of Purimatāla, a festival (down to), which was to last for ten nights and (admission to) which was free; having done so he called his household servants; and having done so, he spoke to them thus—"Go, you, O; beloveds of gods, to Sālā, the forest settlement of thieves; and there, with folded hands, speak to Abhaggasena, the leader of thieves, thus—'Thus, verily, O, beloved of gods, a free festival (down to) lasting for ten nights has been declared by king Mahābala in the city of Purimatāla. Therefore, O, beloved of gods, (tell us) whether plenty of food (4), flowers, clothes, garlands and ornaments for you should be just brought here or you will go there in person.'"

82. Then those household servants assented to (these words of) king Mahābala with folded hands; having done so, they departed from the city of Purimatāla; having done so they went, making short journeys with comfortable halts and morning meals, to the place where Sālā, the forest settlement of thieves, was; and having done so, they spoke, with folded hands, to Abhaggasena, the leader of thieves, thus—"Thus, verily, O, beloved of gods, in the city of Purimatāla, king Mahābala (has declared) a free (down to), or will you go there in person?" Then that Abhaggasena, the leader of thieves, spoke to those household servants thus—

 'O, beloveds of gods, I shall go to the city of Purimatāla personally.' He (then) honoured those family servants..... and bid farewell to them.

✓ 83. Then that Abhaggasena, the leader of thieves, surrounded by many friends etc, taking his bath, (down to), performing the expiatory rites and decorating himself with all ornaments, set out of Sālā, the forest-settlement of thieves; having done so he went to the city of Purimatāla and to the place where king Mahābala was; having done so he congratulated king Mahābala with words of victory; and having done so, he offered to him rich (down to) presents. Then that king Mahābala accepted the rich etc. (presents) of Abhaggasena, the leader of thieves; he received him with hospitality and honour, dismissed him and gave him the (newly constructed) palace for his residence. Then that Abhaggasena, the leader of thieves, after being dismissed by king Mahābala, went to the place where that palace was.

✓ 84. Then that king Mahābala called his household servants; having done so he spoke to them thus—"Go, you, O, beloveds of gods and get prepared plenty of food, drink, eatables and relishes; and having done so, present the plenty of food (4), wine (6) and plenty of flowers, clothes, scents, garlands and ornaments to Abhaggasena, the leader of thieves, in the palace." Then those family-servants, with folded hands, presented...Then that Abhaggasena, the leader of thieves, surrounded by many friends etc, taking his bath (down to) and decorating himself with all ornaments, passed his time in tasting the plenty of food (4) and wine (6) and became intoxicated.

85. Then that king Mahābala called his household servants; and having done so he spoke to them thus—"Go, you, O, beloveds of gods, and close the gates of the city of Purimatāla, and capture Abhaggasena, the leader of thieves, alive; and having done so, bring him to me." Then those household servants assented to him with folded hands; having done so they closed the gates of the city of Purimatāla and captured Abhaggasena, the leader of thieves, alive; and having done so they brought him to king Mahābala. Then king Mahābala got the victim Abhaggasena, the leader of thieves, to be taken (to the place of execution) in this manner. "Thus, indeed, O, Goyama, Abhaggasena, the leader of thieves, (experiences.....down to acts done) in the past."

86. "O, revered sir, having met with death when the time of death approaches, where will Abhaggasena, the leader of thieves, go? Where will he be born?" "O, Goyama! having lived the maximum life of thirty-seven years and having met with death when the moment of death approaches, being impaled on stake this very day when a third part of the day will be still remaining, Abhaggasena, the leader of thieves, will be born among hell-beings in this region of hell (called) Rayanappabhā, where the maximum... Afterwards, coming out from there, so (will be his) transmigrations as in the first (lesson, i. e., as in the case of Miyāputta) (down to) hell. Afterwards, coming out from there, he will be born as a hog in the city of Vānārasī. Being deprived of life there by hunters of hogs, he will be born as a son in a family of merchants in that very city of Vānārasī. There, having passed the stage of boyhood,..... in this manner, just as in the first (down to) will put an end (to all miseries).

4. The story of Sagada.

87. "If, revered sir,".....The { usual } introduction of the fourth (lesson). "Thus, verily, Jambū"—

88. In that age and at that time, there was a city named Sāhañjaṇī which was rich, peaceful and prosperous. Outside that Sāhañjaṇī, in its north-eastern direction, there was a garden named Devaramana. In it there was an ancient temple consecrated to the Jakkha Amoha. In that city of Sāhañjaṇī, there was a king named Mahachanda who was (powerful like the mountain) Mahāhimavat.....That king Mahachanda had a minister named Suseṇa who was proficient in (the expedients of politics, namely,) concialition, dividing, punishment...and in exercising control. In that city of Sāhañjaṇī, there was a courtesan named Sudarisaṇā; (her description).

89. In that city of Sāhañjaṇī, there was a merchant named Subhadda who was rich...That merchant Subhadda had a wife named Bhaddā who was perfect...That merchant Subhadda had, by his wife Subhaddā, a son named Sagada who was perfect...

90. In that age and at that time, the revered Ascetic Mahāvīra.....arrived (there). The congregation and the king appeared; the sermon was delivered; and the congregation returned.

91. In that age and at that time the revered Ascetic Mahāvīra's disciple, (as in para. 37, down to), entered into a main street. There (he saw many) elephants, horses and men.....In the midst of those men he saw a man, with a woman, who was bending down with neck behind being tied down, (whose ears and nose were) cut off, (down to) who was being proclaimed.....A similar thought (occurred to him, down to), the revered (Ascetic Mahavira) answered (thus)—"Thus, indeed, Goyama."

92. In that age and at that time, in this very country of Bhārāha in the continent of Jambuddīva, there was a city named Chhagalapura. In it, there was a king named Sīhagiri (who was powerful like the mountain) Mahābhīmat. In that city of Chhagalapura, there lived a shepherd named Chhania who was rich...impious (down to) and who took delight in evil acts.

✓ 93. Many herds—each in a hundred and in a thousand—of goats, rams, 'rojha' animals, bulls, hares, hogs, 'pasaya' animals, lions, deer, pea-cocks, buffaloes, remained confined in the cattle-pen of that shepherd Chhaniya. There were many other persons, paid either in cash or in food, who protected and took care of the many goats (down to) buffaloes. There were many others who remained (in the pens of) goats etc. Many others of his men, paid either in cash or in food, deprived thousands of the many goats (etc.) of their lives; having done so, they cut the flesh (into pieces) with knives; and having done so they took (them) to the shepherd Chhaniya. And many others of his men fried, roasted and baked the (pieces of) flesh of the many goats (down to) buffaloes, in frying pans, roasting pans, baking pans, earthen frying pans and on burning charcoal; and then having done so, they earned their livelihood (by selling them) in a main street. That shepherd Chhaniya himself also tasted those manifold pieces of the flesh of goats (down to) buffaloes, roasted, fried and baked, (together) with wine (6).

94. Then that shepherd Chhaniya whose acts were such....., having acquired (a store of) many sinful and wicked deeds, having lived the maximum life of seven hundred years, and having met with death when the time of death approached, was born as a hell-being in the fourth region of hell where the maximum duration of life is ten Sāgarovamas.

95. Now, Bhaddā, the wife of that merchant Subhadda, used to give birth to children which were still-born (or which died immediately after birth). All her children died immediately after birth (or were born dead). Then that shepherd Chhaniya, having afterwards come out from the fourth hell, was born as a son in the womb of Bhaddā, the wife of the merchant Subhadda, in this very Sāhañjanī. Then one day, when nine months (of her pregnancy) were fully completed, that Bhaddā, the wife of the merchant, gave birth to a son. Then the parents placed that boy under a cart as soon as he was born and caused him to be brought back afterwards (lit. a second time); (they then) reared him up in due course, protecting and nursing him, as in the case of Ujjhiyaya (down to)—"As this son of ours was placed under a cart as soon as he was born, so let this son of ours be named Sagaḍa." The rest as in the case of Ujjhiyaya. Subhadda met with death on the Lavaṇa ocean; the mother (of the boy) also died; and he, too, was turned out of his own house. Then that boy Sagaḍa, being turned out of his own house, (grew up happily) in squares,...in the same way. (i. e., as in the case of Ujjhiyaya, down to) came in contact with the courtesan Sudarisaṇā.

96. Then that minister Suseṇa got the boy Sagaḍa, one day, turned out of the house of the courtesan Sudarisaṇā; having done so he kept the courtesan Sudarisanā as his own mistress; and having done so he passed his time, enjoying excellent human pleasures with the courtesan Sudarisanā.

97. Then that boy Sagada, being turned out of the house of Sudarisanā and not getting thought, (pleasure etc.) in anything else, secretly entered the house of Sudarisanā one day and enjoyed excellent human pleasures with Sudarisanā.

✓ 98. Now, the minister Suseṇa, after taking his bath (down to and) decorating himself (and being surrounded) by a circle of men, went to the place where the house of the courtesan Sudarisanā was; having done so he saw the boy Sagada enjoying excellent human pleasures with the courtesan Sudarisanā; having done so and having got quickly exasperated (down to) blazing with anger and having contracted his eyebrows so as to form three wrinkles on his forehead, he got the boy Sagada captured by his attendants. Having done so, he made (him) crushed (by the strokes of) bones,...having done so, he got him bound so as to make him bend down with neck behind; having done so he went to the place where king Mahachanda was; and having done so he spoke to him, with folded hands, thus—"Thus, indeed, my lord, the boy Sagada has offended my inner-apartment." Then that king Mahachanda spoke to the minister Suseṇa thus—"O, beloved of gods, you yourself administer punishment to the boy Sagada." Then that minister Suseṇa, being permitted by king Mahachanda, got the boy Sagada and the courtesan Sudarisanā taken to the place of execution in this manner. It is thus, indeed, Goyama! that the boy Sagada experiences...in the past."

99. "O, revered sir! having met with death, where will the boy Sagada go? Where will he be born?" "O, Goyama! having lived the maximum life of fifty-seven years and having met with death, when the moment of death approaches, being made to embrace a big, fire-like, red-hot, iron statue of a woman this very day when a third part of the day will be still remaining, the boy Sagaḍa will be born as a hell-being in the region of hell (called) Rayanappabhā. Afterwards, having come out from there, he will be born as a twin in a 'matanga' family in the city of Rāyagiha. Then, on the twelfth day (of his birth), the parents of that boy will give him this name, in accordance with attributes, of the following description—"So, let this son be named Sagaḍa and let the daughter be named Sudarisaṇā."

100. Then that boy Sagaḍa, leaving behind boyhood and (attaining to) youth, will become...Then that girl Sudarisaṇā also, passing the stage of girlhood, will attain to youth and will also be endowed with excellence of form, youth and beauty and with an excellent body. Then that boy Sagaḍa, being infatuated by Sudarisaṇā's form, youth and beauty, will pass his time, enjoying excellent human pleasures with Sudarisaṇā. Then, one day, that boy Sagaḍa will himself resort to the profession of a cattle-lifter. Then that boy Sagaḍa will become a cattle-lifter, will be impious (down to) and will take delight in evil acts, Having done such acts..., having acquired (a store of) many sinful deeds and having met with death when the moment of death will approach, he will be born as a hell-being in the region of hell (called) Rayanappabhā. Afterwards, coming out from there, he will be born as a fish in the city of Vānārasī. Being killed by fishermen there, he will be born as a son in a family of merchants in that very city of Vānārasī. (He) will attain right belief ..will become an ascetic...in the Sohamma heaven...in the Mahāvideha country...will be liberated.

5. The story of Bahassaidatta.

101. "If, revered sir !..." The (usual) introduction of the fifth (lesson). "Thus, verily, Jambu."

102. In that age and at that time, there was a city named Kosambī which was rich, peaceful (and prosperous). Outside (that city), there was a garden (named) Chandoyarāṇa. (In it, there was a temple consecrated to) the Jakkha Seyabaddha.

103. In that city of Kosambī, there was a king named Sayāṇīya who was (powerful like the mountain) Mahāhimavat. (He had) a queen (named) Miyavāī. That Sayāṇīya had, born of his queen Miya, a son named prince Udāyana who was perfect...and who was the heir-apparent. That Prince Udayana had a queen named Paumāvāī.

104. That Sayāṇīya had a priest named Somadatta who was (proficient in) the Rinvveya...That priest Somadatta had a wife named Vasudattā. That Somadatta had, born of his wife Vasudattā, a son named Bahassaidatta who was perfect...

105. In that age and at that time the revered Ascetic Mahāvīra.....arrived (there). In that age and at that time the revered Goyama in the same way (down to) entered into a main street;-in the same manner he saw elephants, horses and a man amidst men. (A similar) thought (occurred to him). In the same manner he asked (the narration of) the past existence. The revered (Ascetic Mahāvīra) replied—"Thus, indeed, Goyama."

106. In that age and at that time, in the country of Bhāraka, in this very continent of Jambuddīva, there was a city named Savvaobhadda which was rich, peaceful and prosperous. In that city of Savvaobhadda there was a king (named) Jiyasattu. That king Jiyasattu had a priest named Mahesaradatta who was proficient in Riuvveya (down to) Athayvaya.

107. Then that priest Mahesaradatta, with the desire of increasing the strength of the kingdom of king Jiyasattu, every morning got captured one boy of the Brahmana class, one boy of the warrior class, one boy of the merchant class and one boy of the Shudra class; having done so he got their heart-balls taken out while they were still alive; and having done so, he performed a sacrifice to avert king Jiyasattu's evil. Then that priest Mahesaradatta (got captured and sacrificed as above) two (boys) each of the Brahmana, warrior, merchant and Shudra classes on every eighth, and fourteenth days (of every fortnight), four each every four months, eight each every six months, and sixteen each every year. Whenever king Jiyasattu was engaged in fighting the army of an enemy, the priest Mahesaradatta got captured by his servants eight hundred boys of the Brahmana class, eight hundred boys of the warrior class, eight hundred boys of the merchant class and eight hundred boys of the Shudra class; having done so he got their heart-balls taken out while they were still alive; and having done so, he performed a sacrifice to avert king Jiyasattu's evil. Then the enemy's army was either destroyed or checked immediately.

108. Then that Mahesaradatta, whose acts were such..., having acquired (a store of) many sinful deeds, having lived the maximum life of thirty hundred years, and having met with death when the time of death approached, was born in the fifth region of hell where the maximum duration of life is seven Sāgarayamas.

109. Afterwards, having come out from there, he was born, in this very city of Kosambī, as a son to Vasudattā, the wife of the priest Somadatta. Then the parents of that boy, when twelve days (of his birth), were completed, gave him this name of the following description—"As this son of ours was born to the priest Somadatta, by Vasudattā, so let our son be Bahassaidatta by name." Then that boy Bahassaidatta, being taken care of by five nurses, (down to) grew up. Then, passing the stage of boyhood and attaining to youth, that Bahassaidatta became capable of understanding and of enjoying pleasures. He was a dear child-companion of prince Udāyana, was of the same age, was brought up with him, and played in dust together with him.

110. Then that king Sayāniya, one day, met with death. Then that prince Udāyana, weeping, crying and lamenting and being surrounded by many chieftens (down to) merchants and others, removed the dead body of king Sayāniya, with costly presents as marks of honour; and having done so, he performed many worldly funeral rites. Then those many chieftens (down to) merchants... installed prince Udāyana as king with great (ceremony). Then that prince Udāyana, (who was powerful like the mountain) Mahāhimavat..., became the king.

111. Then that boy Bahassaidatta had free access to all places and regions and also to the inner-apartment, as he was performing the duties of the priest to the king, Udāyana. Then that priest Bahassaidatta used to enter the inner-apartment of king Udāyana at proper and improper times, in and out of time, at night and in the evening and came in contact with queen Paumāvai on a certain occasion and passed his time, enjoying excellent human pleasures with queen Paumāvai.

112. Now, the king Udayāna, after taking his bath (down to) and decorating himself, went to the place where queen Paumāvai was; having done so he saw the priest Bahassaidatta, enjoying excellent human pleasures with queen Paumāvai; and having done so and having got quickly exasperated...and having contracted his eyebrows so as to form three wrinkles on his forehead, he got the priest Bahassaidatta captured by his attendants; (down to) in this manner he (Bahassaidatta) was ordered (to be taken) to the place of execution. " Thus, indeed, O, Goyama ! the priest Bahassaidatta (experiences the fruit of acts done) in the past. "

113. " O, revered sir ! having met with death here, where will the boy Bahassaidatta go ? Where will he be born ? " " O, Goyama, having lived the maximum life of sixtyfour years and having met with death when the moment of death approaches, being impaled on stake this very day when a third part of the day will be still remaining, the priest boy Bahassaidatta will be born in this region of hell (called) Rayanappabhā.., similar (will be his) transmigrations...(down to) hell. (Coming out) from there, he will be born as a deer in the city of Hatthināura. Being killed there by hunters of deer, (he will be born) as a son in a family of merchants in that very city of Hatthināura; (will attain) right belief...(will be born) in the Sohamma heaven...(will be born) in the Mahāvīdeha country...and will be liberated. The (usual) conclusion."

6. The Story of Nandī.

114. "If, revered sir, "...The (usual) introduction of the sixth (lesson). "Thus, verily, Jambu."

115. In that age and at that time, there was a city named Mahurā. (outside that city) there was a garden (named) Bhaudīa...the Jakkha Sudamsaṇa. There was a king (named) Siridāma. (He had) a wife (named) Bandhusirī. (They had) a son (named) prince Nandivaddhana who was perfect...and who was the heir-apparent.

116. That Siridāma had a minister named Subandhu who was (proficient in) conciliation, punishment...That Minister Subandhu had a son named Bahumitta who was perfect...That king Siridāma had a barber named Chitta who used to perform agreeable and manifold duties of a barber to king Siridāma and had free access to all places and regions and also to the inner-apartment.

117. In that age and at that time, the Ascetic arrived (there); the congregation appeared; the king (also) set out (down to) the congregation returned.

✓ 118. In that age and at that time, the Ascetic's senior-most...(down to) entered into a main street. In the same manner he saw elephants, horses and men...In the midst of those men he saw a man (down to) who was surrounded by men and women. Then the royal officers seated that man, in squares, on heated and fire-like iron thrones. After that they got him, who was amidst men, coronated in various ways and with great (ceremony)-some pouring on him fire-like heated iron pots filled with copper, some...filled with tin, some...filled with lead, some...filled with water mixed with chumam, and some...filled, with oil mixed with salt. After that they put on him a fire-like heated necklace (with eighteen strings) by holding it with a pair of iron tongs. After that they put on him a half-necklace (i. e., one with nine strings) (down to) ' patta ' ornament (worn on the forehead) and the crown. A similar thought (occurred to Goyama, down to Mahavira) answered (thus)—"Thus, indeed, O, Goyama."

119. In that age and at that time, in this very country of Bhārāha in the continent of Jambuddīva, there was a city named Sīhapura which was rich. In that city of Sīhapura there was a king named Siharaha. That king Siharaha had a jailor named Dujjohana who was impious (down to) and who took delight in evil acts.

✓ 120 That jailor Dujjohana had these articles of the following description kept in the jail (for torturing prisoners)—There were many iron pots kept heated on fire, some (of which were) filled with copper, some filled with tin, some filled with lead, some filled with water mixed with chunam and some filled with oil mixed with salt. That jailor Dujjohana had many camel-shape earthen pots completely filled—some with the urine of horses, some with the urine of elephants, some with the urine of cows, some with the urine of buffaloes, some with the urine of camels, some with the urine of goats and some with the urine of rams. That jailor Dujjohana had many hand-cuffs, fetters for feet, ' hadīs ' (heavy wooden frames in which a prisoner's feet are held fast), shackles and iron chains, collected together into heaps. That jailor Dujjohana had many bamboo-sticks, cane-sticks, tamarind-sticks, fine leather whips, whips and bark-cords, kept in heaps. That Jailor Dujjohana had many slabs of stone, sticks, clubs and small ploughs, kept in heaps. That jailor Dujjohana had many ropes, straps, traps and ropes made of hair, kept in heaps. That jailor Dujjohana had many swords, saws, razor-blades and the 'Kalambachira' weapons, kept in heaps. That jailor Dujjohana had many iron nails, thin bamboo-sticks, leather straps and the 'scorpion-sting' weapons, kept in heaps. That jailor Dujjohana had many needles, big needles and small clubs, kept in heaps. That jailor Dujjohana had many instruments for causing pimples, small razors, axes, nail-cutters and blades of 'darbha' grass, kept in heaps.

121. Then that jailor Dujjohana got captured by his servants many thieves, debauches, thieves who break open knots of bundles, offenders against the state, debtors, persons committing infanticide, murderers of confiding persons, gamblers and rogues (in the kingdom) of king Siharaha; having done so he made them lie flat on the back; having done so he made them open their mouth with an iron bar; and having done so he made some (of them) to drink red-hot copper, some to drink tin, some to drink lead, some to drink water mixed with chunam, some to drink oil mixed with salt, and he bathed some with the same. He made some of them to lie flat on the back; having done so he made (some of them) to drink the urine of horses, some to drink the urine of elephants, (down to), some to drink the urine of rams. He made some of them to lie with the face turned to the ground, and beat them with straps making a 'chhada chhada' sound; having done so he caused pain to some with the same. Some he hand-cuffed; he fastened fetters on the feet of some; he fastened 'hadis' on the feet of some; he shackled some; he made (the limbs of) some contracted and broken; some he bound with iron chains; he cut the hands of some, (down to) he made (some) wounded with weapons. Some he beat with bamboo-sticks, (down to) with bark-cords. He made some to lie flat on the back; having done so he placed stones on their chests and on them (-the stones) he placed sticks; and having done so he shook them by his servants. He bound the hands and feet of some with ropes (down to) ropes made of hair, (and then) he made them to drink water in a well with their heads down. He caused wounds to some with swords (down to) and 'kalambachīra' weapons; and having done so he anointed them with oil mixed with salt. He thrust iron nails and fine bamboo-sticks into the foreheads, napes, elbows, knees and heels of some, and pricked them with 'scorpion-sting' weapons. He hammered needles and big needles into the fingers and toes of some with small clubs; having done so he made them to scratch the ground. He caused wounds on the bodies of some with weapons (down to) nail-cutters, and covered their bodies with wet 'darbha' and 'kusha' grass; having done so he kept them in the heat of the sun; having done so he pulled out the grass when it was dried up, making a chhada-chhada sound.

122. Then that jailor Dujjohāṇa whose acts were such, having acquired (a store of) many sinful deeds, having lived the maximum life of thirtyone hundred years, and having met with death when the moment of death approached, was born as a hell-being in the sixth region of hell where the maximum duration of life is twentytwo Sāgarovamas.

123. Afterwards, having come out from there, he was born as a son in the womb of Bandhusirī, the queen of the king Siridāma, in this very city of Mahurā. Then, when nine months (of her pregnancy) were fully completed, Bandhusirī gave birth to a son. Then the parents of that boy, when twelve days (of his birth) were completed, gave him this name of the following description—"Let our son be Nandisena by name." Then that prince Nandisena, being surrounded by five nurses, (down to) grew up. Then, that prince Nandisena, having passed the stage of boyhood, (down to) passed his time; he attained youth.....and he was the heir-apparent. Then that prince Nandisena, being greedy of the kingdom, (down to) the harem, wished to deprive king Siridāma of his life and to rule over and to protect the kingdom himself. Then that prince Nandisena passed his time, awaiting many occasions, week points and opportunities (for the killing) of king Siridāma.

124. Then that prince Nandisena, not getting any opportunity of (killing) king Siridāma, one day, called the barber Chitta; and having done so he spoke to him thus—"O, beloved of gods, you are given free access by king Siridāma to all places, (down to) the inner-apartment; and you often perform the duties of a barber to king Siridāma. Therefore, O, beloved of gods! while shaving king Siridāma, you thrust your razor into his neck. Then I shall make you the ruler of half the kingdom; and you will enjoy excellent human pleasures along with me." Then that barber Chitta agreed to these words of prince Nandisena.

125. Then this (thought...) of the following description occurred to the barber Chitta—"If king Siridāma comes to know this undertaking of mine, I do not know with what inauspicious and evil death he will kill me." Thinking thus and becoming afraid, he went to the place where king Siridāma was; and having done so he spoke to king Siridāma, with folded hands, thus—"Thus, indeed, my lord! being greedy of the kingdom etc; prince Nandiseṇa wishes to deprive you of your life and to rule over and to protect the kingdom himself." Then that king Siridāma, hearing this account from the barber Chitta, got quickly exasperated; and having contracted..., he got the prince Nandiseṇa captured by his attendants; and having done so he ordered him to be taken to the place of execution in this manner. "It is thus; indeed, O, Goyama, that Nandiseṇa experiences..."

126. "Having fallen down from here and meeting with death when the moment of death approaches, where will the prince Nandiseṇa go? Where will he be born?" "O, Goyama, having lived the maximum life of sixty years, and having met with death when the moment of death approaches, prince Nandiseṇa (will be born) in this region of hell (called) Rayanappabhā...similar (will be) his trans-migrations. After that he will be born as a fish in the city of Hatthiṇāura. Being killed there by fishermen (he will be born) in that very city in a family of merchants...(will attain) right belief...(will be born) in the Sohamma heaven ...in the Mahāvideha country...will be liberated, will be enlightened, will be released, will be emancipated, and will put an end to all miseries." The (usual) conclusion.

7. The story of Umbaradatta.

127. "If, revered sir,..." The (usual) introduction of the seventh (lesson). "Thus, verily, Jambu."

128. In that age and at that time, there was a city (named) Pādālasaṇḍa. There was a garden named Vana-saṇḍa...Jakkha Umbaradatta. In that city of Pādālasaṇḍa, there was a king named Siddhattha. In that city of Pādālasaṇḍa, there was a merchant (named) Sāgaradatta who was rich...(He had) a wife (named) Gaṅgadattā. That Sāgaradatta had, born of his wife Gaṅgadattā, a son named Umbaradatta who was perfect in all the five limbs.

129. In that age and at that time, the revered Ascetic...arrived (there), (down to) the congregation returned.

130. In that age and at that time the revered Goyama ...in the same manner, went to where the city of Pādālasaṇḍa was; having done so he entered the city of Pādālasaṇḍa through the eastern gate; and having done so, he saw there a man—who was suffering from scab, leprosy, dropsy, fistula, piles, cough, asthma and tumour; whose hands and face were swollen; whose toes, ears and nose were rotten; from the wet openings of whose sores, which were being pricked by insects, pus and blood were dripping; from whose ears and nose saliva was flowing; who was frequently vomiting mouthfuls of pus, blood and insects; who was crying terribly, pathetically and unpleasantly; who was being followed on his path by a swarm of flies; whose head was prominently marked by dishevelled hair; who was wearing patched clothes; who had a broken earthen bowl and a broken earthen pot in his hands; and who was earning his livelihood by begging alms at every house. Then the revered Goyama visited high, low (and middle houses); having done so he accepted sufficient (alms), and set out from Pāḍalasandā; having done so (he went to where) the revered Ascetic (was) ...he confessed to his Master his sins (incurred) in accepting the food and drink and showed them to him; being permitted by the Ascetic (down to) he swallowed the food (without chewing it), just as a serpent enters its hole (without touching its sides); and he purified his soul by practising self-control and penance.

131. Then that revered Goyama, on the second occasion of breaking the fast of taking the sixth meal, having studied (the sacred texts) in the first part of the day, (down to) entered the city of Pāḍalasandā through the southern gate and saw that very man who was suffering from scab; in the same manner (down to) he passed his time (purifying his soul) by practising self-control and penance.

132. Then that Goyama, in the same manner (down to) entering...through the western gate on the third occasion (of breaking the fast of taking) the sixth (meal), saw that very man who was suffering from scab...

133. On the fourth occasion also...the sixth...through the northern...This thought of the following description occurred (to him)—"Alas! this man (experiences the fruit of acts done) in the past"...(down to) he spoke thus—"Thus, indeed, revered sir! moving (for begging alms on the first occasion of breaking the fast of taking) the sixth (meal), I went to where the city of Pāḍalasandā was; and having done so I entered Pāḍalasandā through the eastern gate. There I saw a man who was suffering from scab (down to) earning (his livelihood). On the second occasion of breaking the fast...sixth...I...through the southern gate; on the third occasion...fast...sixth...through the western...in the same manner...Then on the fourth (occasion)...sixth...I entered...through the northern gate, and saw that very man suffering from scab (down to) and earning his livelihood...(This) thought occurred to me." The inquiry about the former existence;...(Mahāvira) replied—"Thus, indeed, Gōyama."

134. In that age and at that time, in this very country of Bhārata in the continent of Jambuddīva, there was a city named Vijayapura which was rich...In that city of Vijayapura, there was a king named Kanagaraha. That king Kanagaraha had a physician named Dhannantari, who had studied the science of medicine consisting of eight parts, namely,—the science of nursing children, the science of surgery, the science of extracting darts from the body, the science of curing the diseases of the body, the science of dealing with antidotes to poisons, the science of casting out evil spirits, the science of elixirs and the science of stimulating manly power,—and who was of auspicious, facile and dexterous hands (i. e., who was very skillful and well-versed in his science.)

135. Then that physician Dhannantari, in the city of Vijayapura, out of the king, the harem, many other chieftens (down to) merchants, many other weak, fatigued, diseased and sick persons, with or without means, and diseased ascetics, Brahmanas, beggars, 'Karotika' and 'Kārpātika' ascetics—(out of these), for some he prescribed the flesh of the fish, for some...the flesh of the tortoise, for some the flesh of the Sāgaradatta spoke to his wife Gangadattā thus—"O, beloved of gods! I too have the same thought in my mind as to how you would get a son or a daughter." (Thus) he consented to this request of his wife Gangadattā.

138. Then that wife Gangadattā, being given permission to by the merchant Sāgaradatta in respect of this matter, (taking with her), plenty of flowers (down to) and being accompanied by the wives (of friends etc.), set out of her own house; having done so, she set out right through the city of Pāḍalasāṇḍa; having done so, she went to the place where a lotus-lake was; having done so she left the plenty of flowers, clothes, scents, garlands and ornaments on the bank of the lake; having done so, she plunged into the lake; having done so, she bathed in the water; having done so and taking her bath, she put on auspicious marks on her body, performed the expiatory rites and came out of the lake with her clothes wet; having done so, she took those flowers etc.; having done so, she went to the place where the temple of the Jakkha Umbaradatta was; having done so, at the sight of the Jakkha Umbaradatta, she bowed down to him; having done so, she touched him with a mop of pea-cock feathers, and wiped the Jakkha Umbaradatta with that mop; having done so, she wetted him with a shower of water; having done so, she wiped his body with a piece of woolen cloth; having done so, she put on him white clothes; having done so, she put on him excellent flowers, garlands, scents and scented powder; having done so, she burned incense (before him); having done so and falling prostrate on her knees, she spoke to him thus—"If, O, beloved of gods! I give birth to a son or a daughter, then indeed,..." (down to she) begged his favour; having done so, she returned in that very direction from which she had appeared.

139. Afterwards, having come out from that region of hell, that physician Dhannantari was born in this very city of Pādalaśaṇḍa, in the continent of Jambuddīva, as a son in the womb of the wife Gaṅgadattā. When three months (of her pregnancy) were fully completed, that wife Gaṅgadattā had this pregnancy-desire of the following description—"Blessed, indeed, are those (mothers).... (down to) the fruit (of human birth and life...),—who get prepared plenty of food, drink, eatables and relishes,—who, having done so, accompanied by (the wives of) many (friends etc.) and taking with them the plenty of food, drink, eatables, relishes, wine (6), and flowers etc., set out right through the city of Pādalaśaṇḍa,—who, having done so, go to the place where the lotus-lake is,—who, having done so, plunge (into the lake),—who, having done so, taking their bath (down to) and performing the expiatory rites, taste the plenty of food (4) with (the wives of) many friends, kinsmen etc.,—and who, having done so, (thus) satisfy their pregnancy-desire." She thought thus; having done so, in the morning when the sun was burning with light, she went to the place where the merchant Sāgaradatta was; and having done so she spoke to the merchant Sāgaradatta thus—"Blessed, indeed, are those (mothers)... (down to who thus) satisfy (their pregnancy-desire); therefore, I wish (down to) to satisfy (my pregnancy-desire)" Then that merchant Sāgaradatta consented to this request of his wife Gaṅgadattā.

140. Then that Gangadattā, being given permission to by the merchant Sāgaradatta, got prepared plenty of food (4); having done so she took with her the plenty of food (4), wine (6), and plenty of flowers etc.; having done so (and being accompanied) by many..., (down to) taking her bath and offering oblations (to deities), (she went to the place) where the temple of the Jakkha Umbaradatta was, (down to) burned incense, and went to the place where the lotus-lake was. Then the wives of friends etc. decorated Gaṅgadattā with all ornaments. Then, being accompanied by (the wives of) friends, kinsmen etc. and by many other women of the city, and (tasting) the plenty of food (4), wine (6), ...that wife Gangadattā accomplished her pregnancy-desire.

141. Then that wife Gangadattā, when nine months (of her pregnancy) were fully completed, (down to) gave birth (to a son). (The parents performed the rite of) 'wishing long life for the child', (down to), "As this son was obtained through the favour of the Jakkha Umbaradatta, so let the son be Umbaradatta by name. Then that (boy) Umbaradatta, being taken care of by five nurses,...grew up.

142. Then that merchant Sāgaradatta, as in the case of Vijayamitta, (down to) met with death when the moment of death approached; Gangadattā also...Umbaradatta was turned out (of his own house), as in the case of Ujjhiyaya. Then, once, sixteen diseases appeared at one and the same time in the body of that boy Umbaradatta. They were:—asthma, cough, (down to) leprosy. Then that boy Umbaradatta, being attacked by sixteen diseases, with his hands rotten, (down to) wanders. "Thus, indeed, O, Goyama ! Umbaradatta experiences (the fruit of acts done in) the past."

143. "Having met with death when the moment of death approaches, where will that Umbaradatta go? Where will he be born?" "O, Goyama! having lived the maximum life of seventytwo years and having met with death when the moment of death approaches, the boy Umbaradatta will be born in this region of hell (called) Rāyanappabhā. Similar (will be) his transmigrations, (down to) hell. Then he will be born as a cock in the city of Hatthināura. Being killed by an assembly of evil persons, he will be born in a family of merchants in that very city of Hatthināura. (He will attain) right belief..., (will be born) in the Sohamma heaven..., in the Mahāvīdeha country...will be liberated." The (usual) conclusion.

8. The story of Soriyadatta.

144. "If, revered sir,..." The (usual) introduction of the eighth (lesson). "Thus, verily, Jambū."

145. In that age and at that time, (there was) a city (named) Soriyapura, (outside that city, there was) a garden (named) Soriyavādimsaga;...the Jakkha Soriya;... a king. (named) Soriyadatta.

146. Outside that city of Soriyapura, in its north-eastern direction, there was a settlement of fishermen. In it, there dwelt a fisherman named Samuddadatta who was impious, (down to) and who took delight in evil acts. That Samuddadatta had a wife named Samuddadattā who was perfect in all the five sense-organs of her body. That Samuddadatta had, born of his wife Samuddadattā, a son named Soriyadatta who was perfect...

147. In that age and at that time, the Ascetic...arrived (there), (down to) the congregation returned.

✓ 148. In that age and at that time; (the revered Ascetic Mahāvīra's) seniormost disciple, (down to) in the city of Soriyapura, (wandering) from house to house,—high, low and middle,—and accepting just sufficient alms, set out of the city of Soriyapura; having done so and while going by the neighbourhood of that settlement of fishermen he saw,—in the midst of a very big and respectable assembly of persons,—a certain man who was emaciated, hungry and fleshless, whose skin touched the bones, whose (bones) made a crackling sound, who was wearing a dark-blue garment, who was crying terribly, pathetically and unpleasantly by reason of a fish-bone having been stuck into his throat, and who was frequently vomiting monthfuls of pus, blood and insects; and having seen him, this thought (5) (occurred to Goyama, down to, “...experiences the fruit of acts done in”) the past.” Thus he thought; and having done so (he went to the place) where the revered Ascetic was,...(down to) the inquiry about the former existence, (down to) the reply—“Thus, verily, Goyama.”

149. In that age and at that time, in this very country of Bhārāha in the continent of Jambuddīva, there was a city named Nandipura. (In it) there was a king (named) Mitta.

That king Mitta had a cook named Sirīya who was impious (down to) and who took delight in evil acts.

✓ 150. Many fishermen, hunters and fowlers of that cook Sirīya, who were paid wages either in cash or in food, every morning killed many 'Sanha' fish (down to) and 'Padāgāi-padāga' fish, goats (down to) and buffaloes, and the 'tittira' birds (down to) and pea-cocks; and having done so they took them to the cook Sirīya. He had many other 'tittira' birds (down to) and pea-cocks; kept confined in cages. (That cook's) many other men killed the many 'tittira' birds (down to) and pea-cocks by cutting their wings; and having done so, they took them to the cook Sirīya.

✓ 151. Then that cook Sirīya cut (into pieces) with knives the flesh of the many creatures living in water, on the earth and in the sky; (and then) he got prepared by frying, roasting and baking, (various flesh-preparations out of the pieces) as follows:—(preparations consisting respectively of) fine pieces, round pieces, long pieces and short pieces; (preparations of pieces which were) cold-cooked, naturally cooked, speedily cooked and cooked in the air; 'kāla', 'heranga' and 'maliṭṭha' (preparations); and (preparations of pieces respectively) seasoned with the juice of the hog-plum fruit, grapes, wood-apples, pomegranates and fish. (His) many other (men) got prepared soups of (the flesh of) fish, deer, 'tittira' birds (down to) and pea-cocks, food and plenty of green vegetable; and having done so, they offered them to king Mitta in the dining hall at the time of meals. That cook Sirīya himself also tasted (4) the baked, fried and roasted flesh of those many creatures living in water, on the earth and in the sky, the soups, the green vegetable and wine (6). Then that cook

Siriya whose acts were such..., having acquired (a store of) many sinful deeds, having lived the maximum life of thirty-three hundred years, and having met with death when the time of death approached, was born in the sixth region of hell.

152. Then that wife Samuddadattā used to give birth to children which were still-born (or which died immediately after birth). All her children died as soon as they were born. (Hcr) thought as in the case of Gangadattā,—asking (for her husband's permission),—begging of the favour (of the Jakkha Soriya),—pregnancy-desire, (down to) she gave birth to a son; (down to) “As this son of ours was obtained through the favour of the Jakkha Soriya, so let our son be Soriyadatta by name.” Then that boy Soriyadatta, (being taken care of by) five nurses, (down to) and having passed the stage of boyhood, became capable of understanding and of enjoying pleasures and (attained to) youth...

153. Then, at a certain time, that Samuddadatta met with death. Then that Soriyadatta, weeping and being surrounded by many friends, kinsmen etc, removed the dead body of Samuddadatta and performed the worldly funeral rites. One day he accepted the leadership of fishermen of his own accord. Then that boy Soriyadatta became a fisherman who was impious (down to) and who took delight in evil acts.

✓ 154. Then that fisherman Soriyadatta's many men, who were paid wages either in cash or in food, (every morning) entered the great river Jamunā with boats; and by straining, agitating, churning, draining and making to flow many pools (in the river) they caught many ‘sapha’ (down to) and (various kinds of nets for catching fish, namely,) 'ayampula', 'panchapula', 'machchhandhala', 'machchhapuchchha', 'jambhā', 'tisirā', 'bhisirā', 'dhisarā', 'visirā', 'hillirī', 'zillirī', 'jāla', 'gala', 'kūdapāsa' 'vakkabandha', 'sutta-bandhana' and 'vālabandhana'. (Then) they filled the boats (with the fish), went to the bank, selected (suitable) places for drying the fish and kept them in the sun. His many other men, who were paid wages either in cash or in food, earned their livelihood by selling, in a main street, the fish which were dried in sunshine, roasted, fried and baked. That Soriyadatta himself also tasted (4) wine (6) together with the many 'saṁha' ((down to) and 'paḍāgāipadāga' fish which were roasted, baked and fried.

155. Then, once, while that fisherman Soriyadatta was eating fish which were roasted, fried and baked, a fish-bone stuck into his throat. Then that fisherman Soriyadatta, being overwhelmed with excessive pain, called his domestic servants; and having done so he spoke to them thus:—"Go you, O, beloveds of gods! and proclaiming very loudly in squares (down to) and in paths in the city of Soriyapura, say thus—"Thus, indeed, O, beloveds of gods! a fish-bone has stuck into the throat of Soriyadatta. Therefore, Soriyadatta will give plenty of money as a gift to any physician (6) who would take out the fish-bone from the throat of the fisherman Soriya". Then those domestic servants (down to) proclaimed.

156. Then many physicians (6) heard this proclamation of this description being announced; having done so they went to where the house of Soriyadatta was and to the place where the fisherman Soriya was; and having done so and thinking by their four types of intellect, (namely,) natural etc., they tried to take out the fish-bone from the throat of the fisherman Soriya by (means of) vomitting, getting rid of feces, pressing, swallowing morsels, and (treatments for) removing and taking out a dart. But they were not able to take out or pass inside (the fish-bone). Then, when those many physicians (6) were not able to take out the fish-bone from the throat of Soriya, they became tired (down to) and returned in that very direction from which they had appeared. Then that fisherman Soriyadatta, being gloomy by reason of the means proving of no avail, and being overwhelmed with that pain, has become emaciated etc. " Thus, indeed, Goyama, Soriyadatta (experiences the fruit of acts done in) the past."

157. " O, revered sir ! having met with death here when the time of death approaches, where will the fisherman Soriya go ? Where will he be born ? " " O, Goyama ! having lived the maximum life of seventy years and having met with death when the time of death approaches, (the fisherman Soriya will be born) in this region of hell (called) Rayanappabhā....., similar (will be) his transmigrations.....hell (After that) he will be born as a fish in the city of Hatthiṇāura. Being killed there by fishermen (he will be born) in that very (city) in a family of merchants.....(will attain) right belief.....(will be born) in the Sohamma heaven..... (will be born) in the Mahāvīdeha country.....and will be liberated." The (usual) conclusion.

9. The Story of Devadattā.

158. "If, revered sir,....." The (usual) introduction of the ninth (lesson). "Thus, verily, Jambū."

159. In that age and at that time, there was a city named Rohīdaa which was rich.....garden (named) Puṇḍha-vivadimsaa.....the Jakkha Dharana...a king (named) Vesamanadatta.....Queen (named) Sirī.....(their son) prince Pūsanandī was the heir-apparent.

160. In that city of Rohīdaa, there dwelt a householder named Datta who was rich.....His wife was Kaṇhasirī (by name). That Datta had, born of his wife Kaṇhasirī, a daughter named Devadattā who was perfect (down to) beautiful and possessed of an excellent body.

161. In that age and at that time, the Ascetic arrived (there).....(down to) the congregation returned. In that age and at that time the seniormost disciple, (at the time of breaking) the fast of taking the sixth meal,.....in the same manner (down to) entered into a main street; (and there) he saw elephants, horses and men. Amidst those men he saw a woman, who was bending down with neck behind being tied down and whose ears and nose were cut off: (down to) he saw her being impaled on stake. This thought(occurred to him), in the same manner he returned (down to) and spoke (to his Master) thus. "O, revered sir, who was this woman in her former existence?" "Thus indeed, Goyama."

162. In that age and at that time, there was named Supatṭha in this very country of Bhā continent of Jambuddīva. (In it there was)

Mahāseṇa. That king Mahāseṇa's harem consisted of five hundred queens, the chief among whom was (named) Dhārīṇī. That king Mahāseṇa had, born of his queen Dhārīṇī, a son named prince Sīhaseṇa who was perfect...and who was the heir-apparent.

163. Then, once, the parents of that prince Sīhaseṇa constructed five hundred stately palaces which were very lofty and spacious. Then, on a certain occasion and on one and the same day, the parents of that prince Sīhaseṇa married him to five hundred daughters of great kings, the chief among them being Sāmā. (They presented him with) gifts in five hundreds. Then that prince Sīhaseṇa passed his time (enjoying pleasures) in lofty (palaces) with five hundred queens, the chief among whom was Sāmā.

164. Then that king Mahāseṇa, one day, met with death. (Prince Sīhaseṇa) removed his dead body...(Sīhaseṇa) became the king (powerful like the mountain) Mahāhimavat...

165. Then that king Sīhaseṇa, being deeply attached to (4) the queen Sāmā, did not pay respect or regard to the remaining queens, and passed his time without paying respect or regard to them. Then the four hundred and ninty nine mothers of those four hundred and ninty nine queens, getting the intelligence of this matter, thought thus:—" Thus, indeed, being deeply attached to (4) Sāmā, king Sīhaseṇa, the husband of our daughters, does not pay respect or regard to them, and passes his time without paying respect or regard to them. Therefore, it is better for us to kill Sāmā by means of fire, poison or weapons." Thinking thus, they awaited many opportunities, weak points and occasions of killing Sāmā.

166. Then that queen Sāmā, getting the intelligence of this matter, spoke (to herself) thus—"Thus, indeed, my lord, the four hundred and ninty nine mothere of my four hundred and ninty nine co-wives, getting the intelligence of this matter, speak to each other thus—"thus, indeed, Sihasena..." (down to) and await (opportunities of killing me). Therefore, I do not know with what evil death they will kill me." Thinking thus and becoming afraid, she went to where the 'anger-hall' was; and having done so, she became down-cast (down to) and meditative.

167. Then that king Sihasena, getting the intelligence of this thing, went to where the 'anger-hall' was and where the queen Sāmā was; having done so, he saw the queen Sāmā down-cast (down to) and meditative; and having done so, he spoke to her thus—"O, beloved of gods, why are you down-cast (down to) and contemplative?" Then that queen Sāmā, being thus spoken to by the king Sihasena, thus spoke to the king Sihasena, boiling with anger—"Thus, indeed, my lord, the four hundred and ninty nine mothers of my four hundred and ninty nine co-wives, getting the intelligence of this matter,...called each other and having done so they spoke thus—"Thus, indeed, being deeply attached to the queen Sāmā, king Sihasena does not respect our daughters..." (down to) they are awaiting opportunities and occasions (for killing me). Therefore I do not know...Being afraid (down to), I have become meditative,"

168. Then that Sihasena spoke to the queen Sāmā thus—"O, beloved of gods, do not be downcast (down to) and contemplative. I shall so exert myself that you will have no trouble or harassment from anywhere." So saying, he consoled her with those sweet (6) words; having done so he returned from there; having done so he called his household servants; and having done so, he spoke to them thus—"Go you, O, beloveds of gods! and construct, outside the city of Supaitṭha, a vast and charming (4) palace, supported on hundreds of pillars, and report to me the execution of this order." Then those household servants responded (to this order) with folded hand; having done so they constructed, in the western direction outside the city of Supaitṭha, a vast and charming (4) palace which was supported on hundreds of pillars; (then) they went to the place where the king Sīhasena was; and having done so, they reported to him the execution of that order.

169. Then, on a certain occasion, that king Sīhasena invited the four hundred and ninty nine mothers of the four hundred and ninty nine queens. Then, being invited by the king Sīhasena, those four hundred and ninty nine mothers of the four hundred and ninty nine queens, decorated themselves with all ornaments with due splendour and went to where the city of Supaitṭha was and to the place where the king Sīhasena was. Then that king Sīhasena gave the four hundred and ninty nine mothers of the four hundred and ninty nine queens the (newly constructed) palace for their residence.

170. Then that king Sīhasena called his household servants; and having done so he spoke to them thus—"Go you, O, beloveds of gods! and fetch plenty of food (4) and plenty of flowers, clothes, scents, garlands and ornaments and hand them over at the palace." Then those household servants, in the same manner (down to) handed over.....

Then those four hundred and ninty nine mothers of the four hundred and ninty nine queens decorated themselves with all ornaments and tasted the plenty of food (4) and wine (6) and passed their time, being treated to music and dance.

✓ 171. Then, at the time of midnight, that king Sīhasena, being surrounded by many men, went to the place, where the palace was; having done so he closed the doors of the palace; and having done so he set fire to the palace on all sides. Then those four hundred and ninty nine mothers of the four hundred and ninty nine queens, being set on fire by the king Sīhasena, met with death, lamenting and being left without protection and shelter.

172. Then that king Sīhasena, whose acts were such (4), having acquired (a store of) many sinful deeds, having lived the maximum life of thirty-four hundred years and having met with death when the moment of death approached, was born as a hell-being in the sixth region of hell where the maximum duration of life is twenty-two Sāgarovamas. Afterwards, having come out from there, he was born, in this very city of Rohīdaa, as a daughter in the womb of Kanhasirī, the wife of the merchant Datta.

173. Then that Kanhasirī, when nine months... (down to) gave birth to a daughter who was tender...and beautiful. Then the parents of that daughter, when twelve days (of her birth) were completed, (got prepared) plenty of food (4), (down to) friends, kinsmen,...gave (her this) name.—‘ So let our daughter be Devadattā by name.’ Then that daughter Devadattā, being taken care of by five nurses (down to) grew up.

174. Then that daughter Devadattā who had passed the stage girlhood, was endowed with excellence of youth, form and beauty, (down to) and with an excellent body. Then, one day, that girl Devadattā, taking her bath, (down to) decorating herself, and being surrounded by many maids who were dwarf, (down to) was playing on a terrace with a ball woven with gold threads.

175. Now, that king Vesamañadatta,—who had taken his bath, (down to) and decorated himself, who had mounted a horse and was surrounded by many men,—went, in the course of his horse-ride, neither very near nor very far from the house of the householder Datta. Then, while going, that king Vesamañā saw the girl Devadattā, playing on a terrace with a ball woven with gold threads. Being amazed by the youth, beauty etc. of the girl Devadattā, he called his household servants; and having done so, he spoke to them thus—“O, beloveds of gods, whose daughter is this? And what is her name?” Then the household servants spoke to king Vesamañā, with folded hands, thus:—“This, O lord, is a girl named Devadattā who is a daughter of the merchant Datta, born of his wife Kaṇhasirī, and who is endowed with excellence of form, youth and beauty and with an excellent body.”

176. Then that king Vesamañā, after returning from the horse-ride, called his confidential men; and having done so he spoke to them thus:—“Go you, O beloveds of gods! and select the girl Devadattā,—the daughter Datta, born of his wife Kaṇhasirī,—as the bride for the crown-prince Pūsanandī, even though the dowry (demanded) for her is the whole of my kingdom.”

177. Then those confidential men, being thus spoken to by the king Vesamāna and being delighted and pleased, assented to his words with folded hands; and, having done so, taking their bath and putting on clean dresses fit to be worn at the time of attending an assembly, went to the place where the house of Datta was. Then that merchant Datta saw those men coming; having done so and being pleased and delighted, he got up from his seat; having done so he went forward seven or eight steps and received them, offering them seats; having done so, when those men refreshed and reposed themselves, being seated on rich and comfortable seats, he spoke to them thus:—"Tell me, O beloveds of gods, what is the object of your coming (here)."

Then those king's men spoke to the merchant Datta thus:—"Verily, O, beloved of gods! we want to choose the girl Devadattā, your daughter, born of your wife, Kanhasirī, as the bride for the crown-prince Pūsanandī. Therefore, O, beloved of gods! if you consider this union to be proper, deserving, praiseworthy and befitting, then offer Devattā as bride to the crown-prince Pūsanandī. Tell us, O, beloved of gods! what dowry should we give." Then Datta spoke to those confidential men thus:—"O, beloveds of gods! this is a dowry to me, that the king Vesamāna has (thus) favoured me through the instrumentality of my daughter." He (then), honoured those confidential men with plenty of flowers, clothes, scents, garlands and ornaments and bid farewell to them. Then those confidential men went to where the king Vasamāna was; and having done so, they narrated to him this account.

178. Then at a certain time, when the lunar day, the astronomical division of the day, the constellation, the day and the moment, were auspicious,—that householder Datta got prepared plenty of food (4); and having done so he invited his friends kinsmen etc.; (then) taking his bath, (down to) performing the expiatory rites, occupying an excellent and comfortable seat, and being surrounded by those friends etc., he passed his time, tasting that plenty of food (4). After taking his meal and coming to the hall after taking his meal, he honoured those friends, kinsmen, near ones etc, with plenty of scents, flowers, (down to) and ornaments. Having done so he mounted his daughter Devadattā, after she she had taken her bath (down to) and decorated herself, in a palanquin carried by a thousand men. Having done so and being surrounded by many friends etc., he went, with all prosperity (down to) with the sound of drums and right through the midst of the city of Rohīdaya, to where the palace of the king Vesamaṇa was and to the place where the king Vesamaṇa was; having done so he congratulated him with folded hands; and having done so he took his daughter Devadattā to the king Vesamaṇa.

179. Then that king Vesamaṇa saw the girl Devadattā brought to him; having done so and being pleased and delighted he got prepared plenty of food (4); having done so he invited friends, kinsmen etc., (down to) and honoured them; having done so he seated prince Pūsanandī and the bride Devadattā on wooden bathing seats; having done so he gave them a bath by using silver and golden jars; having done so he dressed them in excellent garments and poured oblations into fire; and having done so, he made the prince Pūsanandī to accept the hand of the bride Devadattā Then that king Vésamaṇa made the bride Devadattā to accept the hand of the prince Pūsanandī with all prosperity, (down to), with sounds (of drums) and with costly presents as marks of honour; and having done so he honoured and respected the parents, friends (down to) and servants of the bride Devadattā with plenty of food (4), clothes, scents, garlands and ornaments, (down to) and bid farewell to them. Then that prince Pūsanandī passed his time (enjoying pleasures) with Devadattā in a lofty palace, being treated to music and dance of thirty two kinds with the accompaniment of the beatings of the 'muṅga' drums.

180. Then, once, king Vesamaṇa met with death. (Pusa-nandī) removed his dead body (down to)...became the king.

181. Then that king Pūsanandī was devoted to his mother, queen Sirī. Every morning he went to where queen Sirī was; having done so he fell down at the feet of queen Sirī; having done so he smeared her body with oils which were prepared from a hundred and a thousand medicinal herbs (respectively) for the comfort of her bones, flesh, skin and hair. (Then) he got her shampooed with the shampooing of four kinds; having done so he got her body rubbed with fragrant and scented paste; having done so he got her bathed with three kinds of water, namely, hot, cold and scented; having done so he made her to take her meal of plenty of food. When queen Sirī's taking of bath, (down to) performing the expiatory rites, taking of meal and coming to the hall after taking the meal were over,—then only he bathed himself (down to) and took his meal and passed his time, enjoying excellent human pleasures.

182. Then, once, when that queen Devadattā was keeping awake at the time of mid-night on account of family anxieties, this thought (5) of the following description occurred to her:—"Thus, indeed, king Pūsanandī, being devoted to his mother queen Sirī, (down to) passes his time. Therefore, by reason of this distraction, I am not able to enjoy excellent (human pleasures) with king Pūsanandī. Therefore it is better for me to kill queen Sirī by means of fire, weapons, poison or incantations and, having done so, to enjoy excellent pleasures with king Pūsanandī." Thus she thought; and having done so she awaited opportunities (3) of killing queen Sirī.

183. Then, once that queen Sirī, being drunk, was sleeping happily on a bed in a secluded place. Now, the queen Devadattā went to the place where the queen Sirī was; having done so she saw her drunk and sleeping happily on a bed in a secluded place; having done so she cast a glance on all sides; having done so she went to where the kitchen was; having done so she seized an iron bar; having done so she heated the iron bar; having done so she held it with a pair of tongs when it became heated, fire-like and red like the full-blossomed kimshuka flower, and went to where queen Sirī was; and having done so, she thrust it into the anus of queen Sirī. Then that queen Sirī made a very loud wailing sound and met with death.

184. Then hearing the wailing sound of queen Sirī, her male and female servants went to the place where queen Sirī was; having done so, they saw queen Devadattā running away from there; having done so they went to queen Sirī; having done so they saw queen Sirī lifeless, motionless and devoid of life; having done so they went crying, lamenting and weeping and saying 'ah ! alas ! what a censurable act !' to king Pūsanandī; and having done so, they spoke to him thus:—"Thus, indeed, O lord !, queen Devadattā has killed queen Sirī at an immature age." Then that king Pūsanandī, hearing this news from those male and female servants and being overcome by great grief for his mother, all of a sudden fell down to the ground with all his limbs, like a champaka plant cut off by an axe.

185. Then, composing himself after a while, that king Pūsanandī, lamenting (3) with many chieftens (down to) merchants and friends (down to) and servants, removed the dead body of queen Sirī, with costly presents, as marks of honour. Having done so and getting quickly exasperated (4) he got the queen Devadattā captured by his servants and ordered her to be taken to the place of execution in that manner. "Thus it is, O Goyama, that the queen Devadattā (experiences.....) in the past."

186. "O, revered sir !, having met with death here when the moment of death approaches, where will the queen Devadattā go ? Where will she be born ?" "O, Goyama ! having lived the maximum life of eighty years and having met with death when the moment of death approaches, she will be born as a hell-being in this region of hell: (called) Rayanappabhā. (Her) transmigrations,.....plants.....After that, having come out from there, she will be born as a swan in the city of Gangapura. Being killed there by hunters, (she will be born) in that very city of Gangapura in a family of merchants.....(will attain) right belief;..... in Sohamma,.... in the Mahāvideha country ... and will be liberated.

10. The Story of Anjū.

187. “If, revered sir,.....” “The (usual) introduction of the tenth (lesson).” “Thus, verily, Jumbū.”

188. In that age and at that time there was a city named Vaddhamānapura. (Outside that city, there was) a garden (named) Vijayavaddhamāna,.....the Jakkha Maṇibhadda;...a king (named) Vijayamitta. (In that city) there was a merchant named Dhaṇadeva who was rich...(whose) wife was named Piyaṅgū. (They had) a daughter (named) Añjuū, (down to, who possessed an excellent) body. (Mahāvira) arrived (there); the congregation (down to) returned.

189. In that age and at that time...the seniormost (disciple) ... (down to) wandering...(down to) and while going, neither very near nor very far, from the grove of ‘ashoka’ trees in the palace of the king Vijayamitta, saw a certain woman—who was emaciated, hungry and fleshless, whose skin touched the bones, whose (bones) made a crackling sound, who was wearing a dark-blue garment, and who was crying terribly, pathetically and unpleasantly; and having done so, a similar thought (occurred to Goyama, down to) he spoke thus:—“O, revered sir! who was this woman in her former existence?” The reply—“Thus, indeed, Goyama.”

190. In that age and at that time there was a city named Indapura in this very country of Bhārāha in the continent of Jambuddīva. In it (there was) a king ((named) Indadatta. (In that city), there was a courtesan named Puḍhavīsiri; (her description). Then that courtesan Puḍhavīsiri, having brought under her influence many princes (down to) and others, in the city of Indapura, by the manifold employment of magic powders etc., passed her time enjoying excellent human pleasures.

191. Then that courtesan Puḍhaviṣirī whose acts were such (4), having acquired (a store of) many (sinful deeds), having lived the maximum life of thirty-five hundred years and having met with death when the moment of death approached, was born as a hell-being in the sixth region of hell (where) the maximum (duration of life...). Afterwards, having come out from there, she was born, in this very city of Vaddhamāyapura, as a daughter in the womb of Piyaṅgū, wife of the merchant Dhaṇadeva. Then, when nine months ..., that wife Piyaṅgū gave birth to a daughter (who was) named Añjusirī. The rest as in the case of Devadattā.

192. Then that king Vijaya, while riding on horse-back, as in the case of Vesamaṇa, saw Añgū; but he chose her (as bride) for himself, as Tehalī had done; (down to) he (enjoyed pleasures) with his queen Añjū (in a lofty palace).

193. Then, once, that queen Añjū was attacked by a disease of the womb. Then that king Vijaya called his household servants; and having done so, he spoke to them thus:—"Go you, O, beloveds of gods! and proclaiming in squares etc. in the city of Indapura, say thus—"Thus, indeed, O, beloveds of gods! Añju, the queen of the king Vijaya, has been attacked by a disease of the womb. Therefore any physician (6) in this place..." (down to) proclaimed...

194. Then those many physicians (6), having heard this proclamation of this description, went to the place where king Vijaya was; and having done so and thinking by (their four types of intellect, namely,) born (4), they tried to cure Añjū of the disease of her womb; but they were not able to do so. Then, when those many physicians (6) were not able to cure Añjū of the disease of her womb, they became tired, wearied and exhausted, and returned in that very direction from which they had appeared. Then that queen Añjū, being overpowered by that pain and becoming emaciated, hungry and fleshless, cries terribly, pathetically and unpleasantly. "Thus, indeed, O, Goyama! the queen Añjū (experiences.....) in the past."

195. "O, revered sir! having met with death here, when the moment of death approaches, where will the queen Añjū go? Where will she be born?" "O, Goyama! having lived the maximum life of ninety years and having met with death when the moment of death approaches, the queen Añjū will be born as a hell-being in this region of hell (called) Rāyanappabbhā. Similar (will be her) transmigrations, to be understood as in the first (lesson), (down to) plants...Afterwards, coming out from there, she will be born as a peacock in the city of Savvaobhadda. Being killed there by hunters, she will be born in a family of merchants in that very city of Savvaobhadda. Having passed the stage of boyhood there (and having listened to religious discourses) from a worthy monk,.. she will attain perfect knowledge,... (will accept) monkhood,...(will be born) in Sohamma..." "Where will she go from that heaven at the expiry of her existence (there)? Where will she be born?" "O, Goyama! (she will be born) in Mahāvīdeha as (described) in the first (lesson), (down to) will be liberated, (down to) will put an end (to all miseries). "Thus, verily Jambū! the Ascetic (down to) who has attained (liberation) has preached this matter of the tenth lesson in the 'Fruits of bad acts'." "So it is! O, revered sir! so it is!"

Here ends the first part (called) the 'fruits of bad acts' in ten lessons.

The Second Part.

I. The Story of Subāhū.

196. In that age and at that time there was a city (named) Rāyagiha, and the temple Guṇasīlā; (the revered) Suhamma arrived (there). Jambū, (down to) waiting upon him, said the following—"If, revered sir! the Ascetic (down to) who has obtained (liberation) has preached this matter of the 'Fruits of bad acts,'—what matter, sir, of the 'Fruits of good acts' has been preached by the Ascetic (down to) who has obtained (liberation)?" Then the ascetic Suhamma spoke to the ascetic Jambū—"Thus, verily, Jambū, the Ascetic (down to) who has obtained (liberation) has narrated the 'Fruits of good acts' in ten lessons. They are—Subāhū, Bhaddanandī, Sujāa, Suvāśava, Jinadāsa, Dhanāvai, Mahabbala, Bhaddanandī, Mahachchanda and Varadatta."

"If, revered sir, the Ascetic (down to) who has obtained (liberation) has preached the 'Fruits of good acts' in ten lessons,—what matter, sir, of the first lesson in the 'Fruits of good acts' has been preached by (the Ascetic down to) who has obtained (liberation)?" Then the ascetic Suhamma spoke to the Ascetic Jambū—"Thus, verily, Jambū."

197. In that age and at that time, there was a city named Hatthisīsa which was rich,...outside Hatthisīsa, in its north-eastern direction, there was a garden named Puppha-karandaa (abounding in flowers and fruits) of all seasons. In it there was a temple which was consecrated to the Jakkha Kayavaṇṇamālāpiya and which was divine...In that city of Hatthisīsa, there was a king named Adīṇasattū (powerful like the mountain) Mahāhimavat...That king Adīṇasattū had a harem consisting of one thousand queens, the chief of whom was Dhārinī.

198. Then that queen Dhārinī, once, (while sleeping) in a beautiful sleeping apartment, saw a lion in a dream. (The rest of the narration) should be understood as in the case of the birth of Meha, (down to), prince Subāhū (who was born to Dharini as was Meha born to his mother) attained to youth. Knowing that he had become capable of enjoying pleasures, his parents got constructed five hundred stately palaces, (They also erected) another lofty...palace. (The narration that follows is) similar to that in the case of the king Mahābala, but (with this difference that) his parents got him married, on one and the same day, to five hundred daughters of great kings, the chief among them (i. e. the brides) being Puppachūlā. The gifts were likewise in five hundreds, (down to), (enjoyed pleasures) in a lofty palace... (with drums) being played upon...

199. In that age and at that time the revered Ascetic Mahāvīra arrived (there). The congregation set out; Adīṇasattū set out, as Kūṇia had done; Subāhū also set out in a chariot, just as Jamālī had done; (down to) the sermon was delivered and the king and the congregation returned.

200. Then that prince Subāhū, having listened to the religious discourse from the revered Ascetic...and becoming delighted and pleased, rose and stood up from his seat (down to) and spoke thus:—"I put my faith, sir, in the teachings of the Possession-less Ones. (But I am not able to renounce the world.) as many princes etc. (have done) in your venerable presence (down to) but O, beloved of gods! I shall accept in your presence the householder's religion constituted by the five Lesser Vows and the seven Disciplinary Vows." "Just as you please, do not make any delay." Then that Subāhū, (in the presence) of the Ascetic..., accepted the duties of a householder consisting of the five Lesser Vows and the seven Disciplinary Vows; having done so he ascended that very (chariot)...; and having done so (he returned) in that very (direction)...

201. In that age and at that time, Indabhūi, the senior-most disciple..., (down to) spoke thus:—"O, revered sir! how beloved and of a beloved appearance, charming and of a charming appearance, lovely and of a lovely appearance, lovable, unforgettable, attractive, fortunate, of a beautiful form, is prince Subāhū! O, revered sir! to many people also, prince Subāhū is beloved (5) and attractive (4). O, revered sir! he is beloved and of a beloved appearance (5) (down to) and of a beautiful form even to monks. O, revered sir! how did prince Subāhū get, attain and obtain such wonderful human splendour? Who was he in his former existence?" "Thus, verily, Goyama."

202. In that age and at that time, in this very country of Bhārāha in the continent of Jambuddīva, there was a city, named Hatthināura which was rich.... In that city of Hatthināura, there lived a householder, named Sumuha who was rich...

203. In that age and at that time, an elderly ascetic named Dhammaghosa of high birth (down to) who was surrounded by five hundred monks, who was wandering in due course and going from village to village, arrived at the city of Hatthināura and at the place where the garden Sahasambavana was; having done so and having taken a suitable residence (there), he passed his time purifying his soul by self-restraint and penance.

204. In that age and at that time, the elderly ascetic Dhammaghosa's disciple, an ascetic named Sudatta, who was noble (down to) and (who possessed concentrated in his body an immense illuminating) splendour, passed his time observing monthly fasts. Then that ascetic Sudatta, at the time of breaking his monthly fast, studied the sacred texts in the first quarter of the day in the same manner in which the ascetic Goyama had done, took the permission of the elderly ascetic Dhammaghosa, (down to) and entered the residence of the householder Sumuha while wandering (for begging alms).

205. Then that householder Sumuha saw the ascetic Sudatta coming; having done so and becoming delighted and pleased he got up from his seat; having done so he got down from the foot-stool; having done so he took off his sandals; having done so he wrapped a scarf round his face; having done so he went forward seven or eight steps to receive the ascetic Sudatta; having done so, he reverentially moved round him thrice, keeping him to his right; having done so he bowed and greeted him; having done so he went to where the kitchen was; and having done so he became delighted (with the thought) that he would offer with his own hands plenty of food and drink (to the ascetic).....

206. By reason of the householder Suhuma's giving, with three-fold purity (i. e. the purity of body, mind and speech of the giver), food which was pure in three ways, (namly), pure as regards the substance, (i. e., the food given, pure as regards the receiver, and pure as regards the giver), to the ascetic Sudatta,—his (Suhuma's) transmigrations became limited, his birth (again) in human existence was settled, and these five miracles appeared in his house. They are as follows—riches were showered; flowers of five colours were showered; clothes were showered; divine drums were beaten; and even in the sky, there was a (divine) proclamation thus—"O, what a noble gift! O, what a noble gift!!" In squares (down to) and in paths in Hatthiṇāura many people spoke to each other thus—"O, beloveds of gods! blessed, indeed, is the householder Suhuma! (5)..... (down to), therefore, O, beloveds of gods! blessed, indeed, is the householder Suhuma."

207. Then that householder Suhuma, having lived a life of many hundred years and having met with death when the moment of death approached, was born, in this very city of Hatthisīsa, as a son in the womb of Dhāriṇī, the queen of the king Adīmasattū. Then that queen Dhāriṇī, while lying in her bed partly asleep and partly awake, saw a lion (in a dream) in the same manner. The rest (of the narration is) the same (down to, prince Subāhū enjoyed pleasures) in a lofty palace. "It is thus, indeed, Goyama! that Subāhū has got, attained and obtained such human splendour."

208. "O, revered sir! will prince Subāhū be able to accept the state of houselessness, having renounced the state of a householder and having shaved himself in your venerable presence?" "Yes, he will be able (to do so)."

Then that revered ascetic Goyama bowed and greeted the revered Ascetic.....; and having done so he passed his time in purifying his soul by self-restraint and penance. Then, one day, that revered Ascetic Mahāvīra went out of the temple of the Jakkha Kayavaṇamāla, out of the garden Pupphaga, and out of the city of Hatthisīsa; and having done so he passed his time, visiting the country outside. Then that prince Subāhū, who had become a devotee of the Ascetic, and who had comprehended the nature of the soul and the non-soul, (down to), passed his time in offering (alms to monks).

209. Then on every fourteenth and eighth days of a fortnight and on the new-moon and full-moon days, that prince Subāhū went to where the hall for observing the 'Posāhā' fast was; having done so he wiped off the Posāhā hall and carefully inspected the place for getting rid of solid excrements and urine; having done so he spread a mat of 'darbha' grass; having done so he sat on the 'darbha' mat; having done so he took the vow of observing the fast of taking the eighth meal; and having done so and having observed the 'Posāhā' fast of taking the eighth meal in the 'Posāhā' hall, he passed his time.

210. Then, while that prince Subāhū was keeping awake for religious meditation, at the time of midnight, this thought (5) of the following description (occurred to him)—"Blessed, indeed, are those villages, settlements (of people) cities (down to) and dwelling places which are visited by the revered Ascetic Mahāvīra.....Blessed, indeed, are those kings, courtiers,.....who, having shaved themselves, in the presence of the revered Ascetic Mahāvīra, accept monkhood. Blessed indeed are those kings, courtiers,...who accept the religion of a householder, constituted by the five Lesser Vows (and the seven Disciplinary Vows), in the presence of the revered Ascetic Mahāvīra. Blessed, indeed, are those kings, courtiers.....,who listen to religious discourses in the presence of the revered Ascetic Mahāvīra. Therefore, if the revered Ascetic Mahāvīra, while wandering in due course and going from village to village, comes here and visits (this place again), then I shall shave myself (down to) and accept monkhood in the presence of the revered Ascetic Mahāvīra."

211. Then that revered Ascetic Mahāvīra, knowing this thought...of the prince Subāhū, while (wandering) in due course and going (from village to village), went to where the town of Hatthisīsa was, to where the garden Pupphaga was and to where the temple of the Jakkha Kayavaṇamāla-piya was: having done so and having taken a suitable residence (there), he passed his time in purifying his soul by self-restraint and penance. The king and the congregation set out. Then that prince Subāhū (also) set out in the same manner as (described) before (in a chariot) with great prosperity. The sermon was delivered; the congregation and the king returned.

212. Then that prince Subāhū, becoming delighted and pleased on hearing the religious discourse of the revered Ascetic Mahāvīra, asked his parents (for their permission to become a monk) just as Meha had done. Similar was his renunciation-bath, (down to) he became a houseless monk, careful in his movements, (down to) and a celibate. Then that ascetic Subāhū studied the eleven Āṅgas beginning with Sāmāya, from worthy and elderly monks (belonging to the order) of the revered Ascetic Mahāvīra. Having purified his soul by practising penance by observing fasts of taking the fourth, the sixth and the eighth meal etc.; having practised monkhood for many years; having emaciated himself by observing a fast of a month; having cut off sixty meals by not taking food; and having met with death, while engrossed in meditation, when the moment of death approached;—he was born as a god in the Sohamma heaven.

213. At the end of his life (there), at the end of his birth (as a god) and at the end of his stay (in heaven); he will drop down from that heaven and will obtain the human body; and having done so, he will attain right belief; having done so he will renounce the world, having shaved himself in the presence of a worthy ascetic. There he will lead monkhood for many years. Having confessed and repented his sins and having met with death being engrossed in meditation, he will be born as a god in the Saṇamkumāra heaven. (Dropping down) from that heaven, he (will obtain) human body.. renunciation...(birth) in Bambha heaven. Human existence...then in Mahāsukka. Then human existence... then as a god in Aṇaḥ heaven. Then human existence...then as a god in Araṇa heaven. Then human existence...in Savvaṭṭhasiddha. Afterwards, coming out from there, (he will be born) in rich (families) in the Mahāvideha country;...will be liberated (5). “Thus, verily, Jambū! the Ascetic (down to) who has attained (liberation) has preached this matter of the first lesson in the “Fruits of good acts”
